GUSTAVO MADERO EXECUTED

RANTOUL DEBATE ON 'LOVE'

The Rantoul divorce trial at East Cambridge developed a question-box on love today.

In the discussion Judge Hall, attorneys for both sides and Dr. Francis H. Davenport, the Boston surgeon who operated on Mrs. Rantoul, participated.

Questions put to Dr. Davenport led to arguments on love as an "intellectual sympathy," such as Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul, the plaintiff, had admitted in court that she has entertained for Chester C. (Chick-let) Rantoll, the defendant and college classmate of her husband, Edward L. Rantoul.

Mrs. Rantoul is suing her husband for divorce on the grounds of alleged cruelty and abuse.

Having concluded her testimony, Mrs. Rantoul was a spectator in court today.

Her husband was on hand, seated with his junior counsel, William E. Russell, son of the late Governor William E. Russell.

Put Query to Doctor.

Chester C. Rantoll, who was summoned to be on hand today, was in the court house, but did not come into court for the morning session. It was said he would not be called until tomorrow.

The discussion of love came up right after Dr. Davenport, the first witness, took the stand to continue his direct testimony. Dr. Davenport is the surgeon who operated upon Mrs. Rantoul in January 12. He was asked by William Thompson, Mrs. Rantoul's counsel:

Q.—Assuming that a woman is happy in her married life and is in good physical condition, does that state of mind and health predispose her to fail in love with another man?

Attorney Hunt for the defence objected and Judge Hall said:

"I think that I can answer that question myself. If a woman is happily in love with her husband it would seem to me to be a matter of common knowledge that she would be unlikely to fall in love with anybody else."

Then Attorney Thompson put the question this way:

"Assuming that a woman is normal mentally and physically, is the development of an affection which is intellectual and sympathetic in nature for a man other than her husband likely?"

Then ensued an argument whether love is physical, physical and mental or purely psychological.

Judge Joins in Discussion.

After an argument between the two lawyers Judge Hall said: "I think perhaps that this is another one of those conditions in which common knowledge rather than medical knowledge is sufficient to enable one to answer the question."

Mr. Thompson said: "I think perhaps if we ask the doctor if his medical experience will qualify him to answer we shall progress much faster."

Mr. Thompson put the following question to Dr. Davenport:

"Have you had much experience mentally with couples in marital difficulties?"

A.—Yes.

Q.—With your experience in this re-

"What Is Love?" Query in Rantoul Divorce Is Answered by Judge

Assuming that a woman is happy in her married life, does that state of mind predispose her to fall in love with another man?—Question asked today at Rantoul divorce case of Dr. Francis H. Davenport.

Judge Hall, who is hearing the case, said: "I think that I can answer that question myself. If a woman is happily in love with her husband, it would seem to me to be a matter of common knowledge that she would be unlikely to fall in love with anybody else."

Suffrage Bomb Wrecks New Home of Lloyd George

LONDON, Feb. 19.—Waltonon Hill, the magnificent new residence of David Lloyd George, chancellor of the exchequer of the British government, was blown up with dynamite early today in an evident attempt to assassinate Mr. David Lloyd George.

Two hatpins were found by the police among the ruins and this clew taken together with the fact that nearby residents saw several women near Waltonon Hill in an automobile shortly after 4 o'clock led to the theory that the outrage had been committed by suffragists.

Mr. George was not in the house at the time, being in the south of France for his health. He had slipped away from England very quietly and few knew that he was not in his country.

So badly was the structure shattered that it will have to be rebuilt.

A second unexploded bomb was found among the ruins by the workmen who commenced cleaning up the debris after the initial examination by the police.

Now Ask People to Aid Southern New England Line

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 19.—Governor Pothier received a letter from President E. J. Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk Railroad today, suggesting that the people of New England finance the Southern New England Railroad by buying the $6,000,000 worth of bonds which are necessary to continue construction and which, President Chamberlin says, the Grand Trunk is forbidden to guarantee by the Canadian laws. On this condition the Southern New England will be completed as quickly as possible.

Governor Pothier suggests that the General Assembly authorize a referendum on the question of having the State of Rhode Island guarantee the bonds as second guarantor, the Central Vermont Railroad, which is controlled by the Grand Trunk, to be the first guarantor.

President Chamberlain's letter first explained that it is impossible for the Southern New England to be financed as originally outlined by the late President Hays. This President Chamberlain writes, was to issue bonds for the Southern New England and to have the Grand Trunk guarantee them. He says it is impossible to get the Grand Trunk guarantee because Canadian laws forbid any Canadian railroad financing any railroad outside of the Dominion.

Hamburg Line to Run Weekly Boston Boats

Should transatlantic business from Boston warrant it, say officials of the Hamburg-American line who have just arrived from Hamburg, the company will run a weekly service to Europe, beginning in 1914 from Boston, instead of the bi-weekly schedule which has already been planned.

In addition to the 17,000 ton boats, Cleveland and Cincinnati, they will send the Kaiserin Augusta Victoria, 25,000 tons, and the Amerika, 22,500, from this port.

Should the travel not warrant this schedule, the two latter boats will replace the Cincinnati and Cleveland in any event. It is common talk in Hamburg, say the officials, that an immense amount of new business and improvements are expected from the decision of the company to separate from Boston and the line is enthusiastic over the prospects of helping to make Boston a better port.

The bi-weekly passenger service with the Cincinnati and Cleveland will begin in May.

IDENTIFY CAP FOUND AS DORR'S

SALEM COURTHOUSE, Feb. 19.—Positive identification of a leather-lined automobile cap as the property of William A. Dorr was the biggest feature today at Dorr's trial on the charge of murdering George E. Marsh, a soap manufacturer of Lynn.

This cap was found by Antonio des Rosiers on the Lynn Boulevard on April 11, not far from where Marsh's body was found. Des Rosiers also found Marsh's cane, also identified by a housemaid and a chauffeur as the one which the murdered man used daily.

The cap, which is the first link in the chain to be welded by the government against Dorr, was identified by Stanton Bray, who worked in his father's garage, where Dorr had his runabout repaired during his stay in Lynn.

"Dorr wore a long, gray coat and an automobile cap with leather trimmings, and a watch-fob with three initials on it," testified young Bray.

"Is this the cap?" asked District Attorney Attwill.

"That's the cap," answered the witness promptly as he picked it up from the shelf of the witness stand. "and that's the coat he wore."

Bray's Father Not Positive.

T. Warren Bray, father of the previous witness and proprietor of the Central street, Lynn, was not so positive as his son in the identification of the cap. "It looks the same as the one I sold Dorr," he said. The senior Bray testified that Dorr told him his name was "Dow."

"He telephoned to my garage on April 4 that his car was stalled and we towed it in to my place. We found it stalled on Chatham street, near Parrot street. It was a Stoddard-Dayton touring car. We have since seen it at Sibley & Green's garage on Central avenue."

The defendant came to my garage for about a week. The last time I saw him was at noon on April 12, the day of the murder. He paid his bill before he left Lynn. He never acted in any way to attract attention."

District Attorney Attwill in his examination of government witnesses today established the fact that Mr. Marsh, who was seventy-seven years of age, had suffered from a severe illness not long before his murder and he was obliged daily to use his cane because of his troublesome foot. The courtroom on the second day of actual trial, was thronged. There were many women spectators among them servants of the different Marsh households and relatives of the deceased.

Miss Miller Testifies.

The first woman witness was the fifth to testify, was Miss Mary Sandstrom, a Swedish woman of middle-age, who has been employed as a maid at the home of the murdered man for many years.

Miss Miller testified that Mr. Marsh was seventy-seven years of age; that he was a man of regular habits; that he had been ill some time and that he had trouble with his body he was obliged to use his cane all the time. She said he was accustomed to have afternoons with other well-known men of Lynn.

She further stated that Mr. Marsh left home at 9 o'clock on the afternoon of April 11, 1912, which was the last time she saw him alive. They were in the kitchen together and he left by the side door. She told of visits Mr. Marsh made to the home of Dr. Bessie Marsh, of Topsfield, and how James, after his marriage eight years ago, came to live with the father at times.

Mr. Marsh Took His Cane.

She recalled very emphatically that Mr. Marsh took his cane with him when he left home the last time, because she handed it to him before he went out. She was positive about the identification of the cane. In the latter part of February, she said, the son, James Marsh, went to California.

On the Saturday before Mr. Marsh's death, which occurred on Thursday, the witness testified that she received a telephone call from a man whose voice she did not recognize and who did not give any name, but the voice sounded like Mr. Marsh's was home or on his way home.

This was all she could recall of the conversation. She prepared supper for herself and Hannah Marsh, his sister. Mr. Marsh did not return that night. The first intimation she got of his death came from two reporters who called at the house the next day.

Cross-examined by Attorney Barney, Miss Miller testified that she had been employed in the Marsh household for nineteen years. In March, 1911, George E. Marsh and his family went to California and she went with him. They returned in June. During their absence for son, James, went to Topsfield.

Cassel testified he saw Mr. Marsh every day.

Council Takes Up King Pardon Case For Final Action

The petition of Cardenio F. King for a pardon will be discussed at the meeting of the Executive Council this afternoon. It is expected the Council will take final action in the case which has been postponed from week to week for nearly a month. Friends of King declared they were not without hope that he will be released from the State Farm at Bridgewater, where he is serving life.

Mrs. King, wife of the former prisoner, at her home in Winthrop, declared that she has found she has powerful friends at work in her battle to free her husband. She said her own health has improved and that she is "strong in hope." She said:

I find that I have powerful friends of whose existence I was previously unaware. I pray to thank them a thousand times over. It has helped to make me comparatively well again and to lighten my sorrow over the condition of my suffering husband.

Governor Foss, who expressed a keen sympathy for King in a talk he had with former Attorney-General Parker, King's counsel, said:

The matter is in the hands of the Council and has been there for two weeks. I have not discussed it with the Council since referring the matter to them.

NURSES ON STAND IN THE WENZ CASE

The inferring that Henry Wenz, the aged chocolate manufacturer, went through a short time before his death was recited is the Suffolk County Probate Court today when the contested trial of his will was resumed.

Mr. Wenz left his entire fortune to his young widow, who was formerly his typist. Wenz's ninety-year-old mother is seeking a share of the estate.

The story of the chocolate maker's suffering was told by Miss Ida Carter, a pretty nurse, who was in charge of Mr. Wenz when he was a patient at the Faulkner Hospital. The nurse said that her patient was suffering from a heart trouble and a hemorrhage near the base of the brain. He could not walk, she said, without the assistance of herself and a hospital orderly. The nurse said Mr. Wenz spent most of his mornings in a Morris chair and that during the afternoon he slept a good deal. On one occasion, she testified, the patient was so weak that he fell out of bed.

Miss Carter testified that Wenz did not have any reasoning power.

On cross-examination she admitted that Miss Sullivan came to the hospital and talked business with Wenz; that she (Miss Sullivan) on that occasion brought him some cocoa beans and assorted them on the table near his bed.

Here Miss Carter said that Wenz never wore socks. She said he used a piece of red flannel on his feet, and that in dressing she had to assist her patient to fit the flannel before putting on his shoes.

Miss Mary Boedtger of Roxbury testified she was a nurse for twenty-five years. Until recently she conducted a private hospital in Boston Highlands. She rented rooms to patients.

On December 8, 1910, Wenz was brought to her place, she said, and he appeared to be ill. He was suffering from brain trouble. Dr. Frederick Cornell said Wenz had a hemorrhage of the brain.

Francisi Orozco, Jr., the rebel leader in the north, today defied the authority of Huerta and announced he would keep his forces in the field.

DEBATE 'WHAT IS LOVE?' IN RANTOUL CASE

sport, do you know the various conditions of different men and women which pre-dispose them to various kinds of love?

A.—Yes.

Q.—Assume doctor that the treatment by Mrs. Rantoul's husband made a moral, mental and intellectual sympathy with another man possible, would her health, mentally and physically be assisted or retarded by the resumption of a treatment she had come to regard as cruel and abusive? A.—It would be retarded in my opinion.

Q.—By Judge Hall: Assuming doctor, a married couple between whom trouble had occurred were undertaking to readjust matters, would subsequent correspondence have a more serious effect if the woman had a love affair she was trying to forget? A.—Yes.

Letters between Mrs. Lois Rantoul and Rantoul are expected to form an additional feature of the suit.

The defence, in cross-examination, has drawn from Mrs. Rantoul's lips admissions of love for Rantoul.

Rantoul gave her addressing envelopes in which to mail letters to him. She also received letters from Rantoul. The husband's counsel may offer these letters in evidence.

"Learned of New Love."

Spectators who have followed the case with keenest attention so far are waiting with increased interest for the reading of these letters, to see if they illuminate any further the "intellectual sympathy" and "attentive kindness" which Mrs. Rantoul says she found in Rantoul.

It was of Rantoul that Mrs. Rantoul has testified:

With Mr. Rantoul, I learned a newer interpretation of love. For this, the mind must be to accord in everything. That accord was what I found with "Chil."

I have put him absolutely out of my life. I have forced myself never even to think of him.

I do not know if I love him now.

Mrs. Rantoul has also sworn:

It was with Rantoul that Mrs. Rantoul, favorite granddaughter of the poet, James Russell Lowell, took auto rides, read philosophy and attended lectures.

Her love for Rantoul was concealed from her husband for eight months.

She twice permitted Rantoul to kiss her.

She had received gifts from him, telephoned to him daily, carried on a correspondence with him which she concealed from her husband.

$25,000 FIRE IN CITY HOSPITAL COAL SUPPLY

The Boston City Hospital's coal pocket in the rear of Albany street, South End, was damaged $25,000, lumber yards on either side of Roxbury canal were in grave danger and the City Hospital authorities felt some concern in a three-alarm fire today.

The fire started in the bottom of the coal pocket's seventy-foot tower. Its plank sheathing was burned off, falling with showers of sparks into the canal waters. The flames ate through the coal pocket proper, a two-story wooden shed, fifty by thirty-five feet. Two-thirds of the structure was destroyed, owing to the boiler room not before they were checked.

Eight firemen and coal passers in the coal pocket and boiler room were driven out by flames or smoke.

One of the fire boats came up through Fort Point channel and the South Bay, clear to the narrow reach of the canal and played its powerful gun streams on the blazing pocket and tower to advantage.

The City Hospital coal pocket is in the rear of the hospital ambulance station, which is on the east side of Albany street, opposite the main hospital grounds.

Two lumber schooners lay at canal wharves when the fire started. The George W. Anderson, laden with lumber for Curtis & Pope, was at the latter's wharf on the Albany street side of the canal, just south of the fire.

Another schooner was berthed on the opposite side of the canal.

Flying embers endangered these vessels, as well as the Curtis & Pope sheds and lumber stacks.

HUSBAND AND WIFE DEAD FROM WORRY AS EACH FALLS ILL

ADAMS, Feb. 19.—Worry over each other's illness caused the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Dow of Summer street. The wife died as the church bells were tolling midnight Tuesday and the husband passed away at exactly the same hour today. A double funeral will be held Friday at noon.

The husband and wife were each about fifty years old and were very devoted. Mr. Dow was a prominent dry goods merchant. Last week the husband was stricken with pneumonia. Mrs. Dow was constantly at his bedside. She feared that he would die. Just as he had passed the danger point the wife was taken ill, and the husband, in turn, feared that her life would not be saved. Worrying over each other's sickness, while both were in a weak condition, resulted in their deaths.

Mr. and Mrs. Dow are survived by a daughter, Mrs. Edward Casey of Newton Highlands.

Crippled Steamer Bulgaria Creeps Into Port Today

With one life boat torn away, the wireless operator's detached cabin on the upper deck smashed to pieces, the wireless itself out of commission, and the galley and rooms containing stores flooded out, the Hamburg-American freighter, Bulgaria, arrived in Boston today, five days overdue.

Officers of the ship encountered the worst gales of the season on this trip. The most damage was done last Friday, when a heavy sea struck the vessel on the starboard side and smashed the wireless operator's room. Had the operator not stepped out a moment previous he would have lost his life, as the cabin was crushed to pieces.

The same sea smashed in doorways in an alley near the galley and stores, and flooded that section of the ship. The life boat was torn away fifty feet above the water line.

Henry Russell Asks Injunction Against Kahn and Magazine

Henry Russell, managing director of the Boston Opera House, wants an injunction against Philip L. Kahn, connected with a local magazine, to restrain Kahn from printing false statements about him, his management of the opera house, the company or his employes. An order of notice has been issued by the court and the issues will be heard in the Suffolk Superior Court on February 21.

Director Russell alleges that Kahn is responsible for an article in a magazine of recent date, which tended to hold him up to public ridicule, hatred and contempt, and was false and malicious.

He further alleges that on the night of February 13 Kahn's agents appeared in front of the Boston Opera House and offered copies of the pamphlet for sale, thereby creating a nuisance.

The bill charges that the article in question not only attacks Russell, but men and women employed at the Boston Opera House in a manner that is a reflection on their character.

Children Romp Into House to Find Mother a Suicide

When the two little sons, Warren and William, and three-year-old daughter Louise of Mrs. William Barrett came trooping into the kitchen of their home, No. 56 Wallace street, West Somerville, this noontime they stopped while eyed when they saw the body of their mother hanging by a rope from the hinge of a door on the opposite side of the room. The woman was a graduate nurse.

"Keep quiet," said one of the boys as the girl began to cry, "Mamma must be dead."

The three little ones tiptoed out into the entry and hurried to the street. They found Patrolman James Deware, and he summoned Dr. Harold W. Ayer. The mother was dead.

Mrs. Barrett and her children came to Somerville eight months ago when Mr. Barrett secured employment as driver for an express company.

Ill-health was the cause for her act.

SEEK THIRD MAN FOR FIREMEN'S PEACE BOARD

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Plans for arbitrating the differences between the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers and the Eastern Railroads are going forward busily today. Now that the deadlock has been broken interest centres on the steps that will be taken by the arbitration body of three and especially in the third person to be chosen.

Albert Phillips, vice-president of the Brotherhood, of Sacramento, will be the firemen's representative on the "Erdman Act" Board and W. W. Atterbury of the Pennsylvania Railroad will be the railroad's arbitrator. The third person will be chosen by these two.

TELEGRAPHERS ON MELLEN LINES ASK BETTER PAY

Vice-President T. M. Pelham of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, with committees representing the key men on all of the Mellen lines, will meet representatives of the lines at the South Station tomorrow and Friday, to discuss demands for better conditions. Today he is in Albany attending hearings on the situation.

It became known today that about sixty of the tower men employed on the Boston Elevated have become members of the telegraphers' union, and will be represented at future conferences.

Every road except the Bangor & Aroostook has received a demand for higher wages and shorter hours, with the exception of the men employed by the Boston Terminal Company, who ask only for better pay.

The lines affected are the New York, New Haven & Hartford, the Boston & Maine, the New York Central, the New York, Ontario & Western, the Delaware & Hudson and subsidiary companies.

Vice-President Pelham says there is prospect of an amicable arrangement.

FOUR CELEBRATE 35 YEARS IN LAW

Four men today started in their thirty-fifth year as members of the Massachusetts bar. They were the only men who took the examination in 1878, and all of them passed at the same time. They are Judge Albert Bossom of the Chelsea police court, George S. Hilliard, counsel for the Metropolitan Water and Sewerage Board; Clarence H. Cooper, clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court, and W. Frederick Kimball, a Boston attorney. The anniversary of their admission to the bar was celebrated by a dinner at the University Club, given by Judge Bossom.

Man Is Burned Saving Children in Roxbury Fire

Two children were overcome by smoke, a man was burned about the face and hands rescuing one of them, and their mother suffered a nervous breakdown as the result of a fire at No. 6 Terry street, Roxbury, today. The blaze was started in the kitchen of Mrs. Mary Farren's home on the second floor by her two children, Catherine, aged three, and John, age two. The mother was in the basement at the time.

Catherine Manning, who lives across the street, discovered the fire when she looked out of her parlor window. She cried out to Andrew Reed, who lives down stairs in the house that was burning. Reed ran up the back stairs and pushing his way through the smoke-filled kitchen found little Catherine in one of the bedrooms. He was burned in carrying her to safety. The fire department had arrived by this time and the firemen rescued little John, who also was overcome by smoke. They took him to the hospital, but he will recover. The mother, when she heard the news, fainted, but was revived.

DAYLIGHT BREAKS IN SOMERVILLE

Somerville is aroused over a number of daylight burglaries. During the last three days several cases have been reported to the police where, in the absence of the residents, houses have been broken into and silverware and other valuables have been taken, after furniture has been wrecked. Alfred E. Danielson of No. 9 Dana street reports the loss of $60 worth of silverware. Peter Lundberg of No. 15 Joseph street found his house broken into in a similar manner and a gold watch gone. Previous to this three breaks were reported from apartment houses on Preston road.

ASKS STATE TO GET FACTS IN NEW HAVEN'S ACTIVITY IN HILL TOWNS

Representative John G. Stevens of Marblehead this afternoon offers an order in the House of Representatives calling for a legislative investigation of the AMERICAN'S charges that the so-called "Hill Towns" movement, in favor of turning the trolley business of Western Massachusetts over to the New Haven Railroad, was financed by the New Haven at the order of Charles S. Mellen.

The AMERICAN welcomes such an inquiry by the Legislature and will cheerfully do everything in its power to help the investigators.

The State House inquiry cannot come too soon to please this newspaper.

Backed by New Haven.

The charge, in brief, is that the great public movement which appeared to come from the isolated hill towns—begging that regardless of a settled policy of Massachusetts that railroads shall not engage in the trolley business, the New Haven be permitted to engage in that business in the West to the extent of $5,000,000—was not a bona fide "Hill Towns" movement but was supported to the extent of thousands of dollars by the New Haven Railroad.

The AMERICAN on Sunday printed this charge and backed it up with the text of a certain letter.

New Haven, Feb. 10, 1912.

Mr. T. E. Byrnes,

Vice-President, Boston:

Referring to conversation the other day, I would be glad to receive, for transmission to Springfield, voucher in the sum of $1,100 favor of H. A. Moses; or, if you prefer, I will be glad to have you transmit same to him.

(Signed) L. S. STORRS.

Vice-President.

The AMERICAN charged, and still charges, that $1,000 went from New Haven to M. A. Moses of Springfield, "FOR THE HILL TOWNS TRANSIT ASSOCIATION," in the month of February.

Confirmation of Charges.

The AMERICAN further charged, and charges, that $1,000 followed this amount in May, and $2,500 in July, a total of $4,000 given by the New Haven Railroad to the Hill Towns Association, to help the Hill Towns Association prove to the Legislature, the press and the people of Massachusetts that the trolley roads of the Hill Towns, of and by themselves, want the New Haven Railroad to take the trolleys.

And to this extent the AMERICAN characterized the Hill Towns movement as a "fake" movement, secretly supported by the New Haven Railroad for the purpose of hunbugging Legislature and people.

Representative Stevens, whose name was today associated with the order for an inquiry into the "Hill Towns" movement, is a member of this year's Committee on Street Railways.

Representative Stevens is an Essex County Democrat. He is a shoe manufacturer, forty years old. He is serving his third term on Beacon Hill.

The charges of the AMERICAN are in large part confirmed by a lengthy article in the Springfield Republican, which newspaper, while consistently friendly to the New Haven plan in Western Massachusetts, substantially admits that the New Haven was a "contributor" to the Hill Towns Association.

Just a Few Pointers.

These suggestive paragraphs are picked from the Springfield Republican story:

That money had been CONTRIBUTED BY THE RAILROAD toward some of the expenses of the association in the fight for last year's trolley bill was ADMITTED; but it was said that this money was given after the fight had been completed, when the association found itself unable to pay all its bills and did not want to ask additional town appropriations.

The RAISING OF THE AMOUNT NEEDED to complete the campaign, it was explained, WAS IN CHARGE OF H. A. MOSES of this city and it was said that SOME OF THE MONEY WAS CONTRIBUTED BY THE NEW HAVEN RAILROAD.

One point noticeable in the AMERICAN article (says the Republican) is that the dates given for the passing of the alleged vouchers to work up a Hill Towns movement indicate a time considerable later than that when the movement was gotten under way.

Things to Observe.

All of which may be proved or disproved by a legislative inquiry into the origin, history and financial support of the Hill Towns Transit Association.

For the present it may interest Governor Foss and the members of the Legislature to observe the AMERICAN'S claim that $1,100 of the money of New Haven stockholders was sent to Moses by Mellen in FEBRUARY, $1,000 in MAY, and $2,500 in JULY OF LAST YEAR.

And to observe further that it was on JUNE 8 OF LAST YEAR that Governor Foss vetoed the New Haven's Western Massachusetts Trolley Merger bill.

And to note that on that same day the Governor recommended the appointment of the Western Massachusetts trolley problem by a special commission, which was later to be the "Hill Towns" plan.

And to recall that such a commission was appointed, consisting of Governor Calvin Coolidge, SENATOR CHARLES V. BLANCHARD, Senator John F. Hunt, REPRESENTATIVE LEONARD P. HARDY, Representative Charles L. Carr, Representative H. Bert Knowles and Representative John F. Meaney.

Six of these Commissioners have reported to the present Legislature a bill substantially like that vetoed by Governor Foss.

Representative Meaney of Blackstone signed a minority report against the proposition.

Blanchard is this year Senate Chairman of the Committee on Street Railways.

Hardy is the House Chairman of the same committee.

And on the second page of the 195-page report of the Coolidge-Blanchard-Hardy-Meaney Special Commission, Representative Stevens of Marblehead will observe that:

THE COMMITTEE WISHES TO RECORD ITS APPRECIATION OF THE VALUABLE ASSISTANCE RENDERED BY MANY PERSONS, AMONG WHOM MAY BE MENTIONED THE HILL TOWNS TRANSIT ASSOCIATION OF WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS, FOR THE USE OF AUTOMOBILES AND OTHER ASSISTANCE.

Meaney's Minority Report.

The Legislature had gone home, and the Foss veto was a matter of record when the New Haven's $2,500 went up from New Haven to Springfield last July—Mellen to Moses—for the "Hill Towns Transit Association."

But the special committee had just been named. It was yet to visit the ground. Between July 12 and November 27 last, the special commission held twenty-eight public hearings in eight cities and fourteen towns and heard 200 citizens from sixty-two cities and towns.

Caught with the goods, the New Haven and some of the friends of the New Haven are apparently taking the ground that "of course" the New Haven "helped out," and that "of course" the New Haven "had a right to help."

But until the AMERICAN on Sunday last printed SOME of the facts in its possession, the Hill Town movement had been held out to the Commonwealth and its people as a bona fide uprising of the people of Western Massachusetts in favor of introducing an extraordinary policy by the State and admitting the New Haven to a monopoly of Massachusetts transportation of every variety.

There is no "drive" here at Western Massachusetts.

Everybody at this end of Massachusetts wants to do what is right by the Westerners.

Let the Westerner ponder the minority report of Eddie Meaney of Blackstone:

The $5,000,000 asserted for extensions is admittedly an insufficient amount to build ALL the extensions adjudged necessary in the majority report of the committee. Nobody in or out of the committee estimates or believes that more than 100 miles of railway can be built for the above amount and YET THE NECESSARY EXTENSIONS AS FOUND BY THE COMMITTEE WOULD BE MATERIALLY CONSIDERABLY IN EXCESS OF 200 MILES.

The Railroad Commissioners are given the power to regulate the expenditure of money, but when the $5,000,000 is exhausted the obligations of the New Haven Railroad Company cease, and the lines then unbuilt and their protectors are LEFT TO THE TENDER MERCIES OF THE MONOPOLY CREATED."

Order Is Ready.

Representative Stevens said today that if the charges made by the AMERICAN are true, if the Hill Towns Transit Association movement has been supported, in whole or in part, by money of the New Haven Railroad, the members of this year's Legislature are entitled to know it.

"Therefore, Mr. Stevens said, "I have prepared an order. I expect to introduce it this afternoon."

The House is meeting daily at 2 o'clock. Several members have said that they will heartily support such an order as Mr. Stevens has in mind.

DOROTHY CHESTER, who was awarded silver medal in senior class in annual gymnastic test for girls in Brookline.

Mary Joyce, Mildred Lorance and Thelma McLean are the best girl athletes in Brookline. They possess today the gold medals for winning the most points in their respective class competitions in the annual gymnastic test for girls at Brookline Municipal Gymnasium.

There were gold, silver and bronze medals in each of the three classes. The medals are awarded by the town. The experts were on the vaulting box, ropes and balance beams, with high jump and general drill work, including dancing, also being counted.

In the senior class event Mary Joyce won 28 points, but was hard pressed by the other medal winners. Dorothy Chester (27 points), received the silver medal, and Marion Driscoll (26 points), the bronze.

In the first class for juniors Mildred Lorance won the gold medal with 37 points. The silver and bronze medal winners were Isabel McDonald with 35 points and Lucy Brennan with 31 points.

Thelma McLean won the gold medal in the junior second class with 52 points, Margaret Harris took the silver medal with 50 points and the bronze went to Margaret Donellon with 40 points.

Miss Mary V. McGrath, instructor of women and girls, was in charge. The judges were Miss Flora Miller Biddle of the Sargent School and Superintendent Oliver L. Hebbert of the B. Y. M. C. A. gymnasium.

FOOTSORE ARMY RESTING FROM SUFFRAGE HIKE

WILMINGTON, Del., Feb. 19.—Ready to drop from exhaustion and their pursued their march much further, "General" Rosalie Jones and her army bound for Washington are today resting here in an attempt to gain strength as well as converts to suffragism. Tomorrow the army will press on to Newark.

The rest is much needed. Although their ranks are undiminished, "Colonel" Craft has a badly injured ankle and walked the last few miles on pure nerve, while "General" Jones literally stumbled into the state, tripping over a stone and picking herself up in Delaware.

Another short rest was taken at Naaman-on-Delaware, at the Colonel Tom Robinson house, which was built in 1643, where a white bulldog honored them by displaying a "Votes for Women" sign.

Nine women from the Arden single tax colony at Upton Sinclair was a resident for a time, came across the fields to greet the marchers, after Rhea N. Baldwin, for thirty years postmistress of Claymont had walked "way out to the white bridge" to meet them.

The army annexed a Mann car while passing the tollgate on the Chester Pike, and Jennerette will have a runner. Chief Scout Olive Schuits is to have charge of the car, which is making the journey in a covered basket.

The army, eleven strong, with followers to the number of twenty, who have been recruited from cities on the way from New York, was greeted by the fire department upon arriving here, and Mayor Harrison W. Howell extended the freedom of the city.

Mrs. Martell Quits Home of Husband Who Seeks Divorce

It became known today that Mrs. Mary B. Martell, who remained in the same house with her husband A. E. Martell, the wealthy Dorchester street book dealer, after he had filed suit for divorce against her, has left their home on Carver road, Newton Highlands. Friends of the wife quote her as declaring that despite the divorce proceedings she had no ill feelings against him, but really had a high regard for him.

It is stated that the wife is now visiting relatives, and that all efforts of their friends to effect a reconciliation have been given up as hopeless. The papers were out in connection with the amending of Mr. Martell's divorce libel so as to name a co-respondent.

The child of the couple, a daughter, is now living with her grandfather in Newtonville.

SEEK DAMAGES FOR LOSS OF SLEEP FROM SUBWAY NOISES

Norfolk county jurors will probably be asked to decide whether or not Isaac Gerder of No. 84 Phillips street, Morris Edelstein of Phillips and Grove streets and Alice Schneider of Grove street are entitled to damages for loss of sleep caused by work on the Cambridge subway under Beacon Hill.

Judge Hardy has denied the petition that in view of the fact that the Suffolk jurors might be locally prejudiced or might have too great an interest in the financial responsibility of the city, the case be tried in the Norfolk County Court Each of the contestants claims that the noise day and night interfered with their sleep and the quiet enjoyment of their premises. Light and air was also interrupted by the construction of a high platform while the work was in progress, they say.

CARDINAL O'CONNELL BUYS JUDGE FALLON HOME FOR A RECTORY

Cardinal O'Connell has bought the house at No. 739 East Broadway, South Boston, and for a score of years has been the residence of Judge Joseph D. Fallon of the South Boston Court. After April 1 it will be the rectory of St. Peter's parish, over which the Rev. Mortimer E. Toomey is pastor.

Judge Fallon during his ownership spent large sums beautifying the interior of the residence, which is one of the largest private houses in the Peninsular district. The Judge has sold the house to the head of the archdiocese, as he wishes to live with his daughter in a smaller house he has bought on N street, within one block of the one he is leaving.

MRS. HOLDBACH URGES BALKAN IMMIGRATION

Mrs. Maud M. Holdbach, the English authoress now visiting the United States, talked today to an audience of society women at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, discussing the situation in the Balkans, which she has visited many times.

Mrs. Holdbach is a strong champion of the Balkan peoples. She said she believed that America should throw open its doors to immigrants from the Balkans and of other hardy European races.

She said today:

Wants Quality, Not Quantity.

I do not have great sympathy with Mr. Roosevelt's notions of race suicide, for I think that it is not so much a question of quantity as it is of quality.

America may be proud of such people as are coming to her shores from the countries now engaged in battling with Turkey.

I do not believe in severe methods in education, and the ledal in a home should be one of companionship and service.

There is no book today for the guidance that is the result of the iron will, but this is not necessary where intelligent parents take sufficient thought for their children, and plan carefully for their future.

Duty and Discipline.

In telling of the duty and discipline movement in England Mrs. Holdbach said:

Our great object is to reach not only the children as they are growing up, but the young people who are thinking of getting married. It is too often the case that marriages are entered into with no planning or looking ahead for the family. The children are consequently haphazard, brought into the world to make their own paths and learn through rough experience what they should have received from their parents.

I find less honor and sense of duty among Americans than I expected. I have not become acquainted with many children, but from my observation of older people I should say that home training is lacking.

America is no different from any other country where the people have become rapidly rich. There is too much thought taken of pleasure and ease.

Instead of having to get right down and dig, the children of the rich are seeking how to amuse themselves.

Denies Elopement With Rigo, Son of Chimay's Gypsy

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—The New York police today communicated to the Portland, Ore., authorities that Mrs. Hannah Imstof Kolodsky, who was reported to have eloped from that city three weeks ago with "Jack" Rigo, a young gypsy violinist, had been found here and turned over to the Young Women's Christian Association, which had installed in secrecy her employment.

Mrs. Imstof-Kolodsky, who is a handsome young woman and an accomplished pianist, is separated from her husband. She denies that she eloped with Rigo, but admitted that she met him on the train after leaving Portland. They were not together when the girl was found here.

"Jack" Rigo has lived up to his capacity for romance from his father, Josuel Rigo, the gypsy violinist, who eloped with Princess Chimay, the former Clara Ward of Detroit, twenty years ago.

HUNDREDS OUT FOR $5 PRIZE IN SLANG CONTEST

The Slang Contest for the prize of $5.00 is proving one of the most interesting that the AMERICAN has ever conducted. The contributions are coming in by the hundreds, and if the rule of the learned professors holds good, that the slang of today is often the language of tomorrow, then the American language should be enriched with a good many serviceable words before the contest is over and the prize awarded.

There is much originality shown in many of the expressions submitted; in others, while there is undoubted originality, the meaning is not always immediately clear and has to be explained by the contributor in some lengthy way. While it may be slang all right, the fact that so much explanation is necessary seems that it has little chance for popular usage and therefore of becoming an addition to the language.

ADVANCED THEORY CREDITED TO TWO GERMAN EXPERTS

"The brain, the seat of the intellect and will, which receives all the impressions of the senses and which, with the aid of the spinal cord, coordinates all movements, is particularly liable to disturbances from over-exertion," said John Beasley Webb, the well-known London specialist.

"It is extremely important that great care be taken to prevent increased pressure of the brain and secure the right proportion between work and rest. Dr. Hohmann and Seller, the well-known German authorities on up-to-date hygiene and health, state that nervous debility of the brain is the commonest ailment of our day. They attribute the principal cause to over-exertion, violent emotions, troubles, passion, abuse of the stomach, alcohol and the modern mode of living.

"Com-Vita, the tonic which I am helping to introduce and which can be bought at any of the larger drug stores of Boston, is the only relief for this ailment that I know of outside of a long rest with careful attention to hours and diet.

"Some of the more general symptoms of Nervous Debility are constant headaches, sleep that is broken and restless, constant sensation of depression, pains in the back, loss of appetite and weight, or a general 'run-down' feeling."

The Safe Way to Remove Corns

Paring a corn with steel is dangerous. A slip of the blade means a gash which may result in blood poison.

Treating a corn with unguaranteed remedies is uncertain. They may cure—but they may not. And if they don't, you are money out of pocket.

"Oh joy! I've said good-bye to corns." again they may not.

Pierce's Corn Plasters

Are absolutely guaranteed to cure. If they don't, the druggist gives you back your money.

The pain ceases quickly after applying the first Plaster. In ordinary cases the corn will be removed in 48 hours. With corns of long-standing 5 days are required. But in every case the cure is sure and lasting.

Just try Pierce's Corn Plasters on that painful corn which you think can't be cured. There's a pleasant surprise in store for you. Remember, we take the risk—not you.

SAYS MICHIGAN LAWS FORBADE DOW METHODS

Curtis W. Waterman, a Boston attorney, engaged by District Attorney Pelletier to examine Michigan laws regarding the rights of officials in brokerage concerns, was put on the stand in the Suffolk Superior Court in the trial of Broker Stephen E. Dow.

In the examination by Assistant District Attorney Webber, Waterman stated that the Michigan laws gave officials of such concerns no right to use funds of their companies, nor could one official give another the right to use the money. He cited a case in Michigan, where an official of a company had been held liable for the acts of the funds.

The companies with which Dow were connected were incorporated under the laws of Michigan.

Alfred L. Wyman, a director in the Dow company, resumed the stand today. He repeated his former testimony regarding the fact that he had no knowledge of cross authorizing loans to Dow or to any Dow committee.

Albert C. Harper, transfer clerk of the State Street Trust Company, was called to identify a number of certificates.

GUSTAVO MADERO IS CONDEMNED TO DEATH

SIR HIRAM MAXIM SAYS: "LET AMERICA INTERVENE AND ANNEX MEXICO"

LONDON, Feb. 19.—Sir Hiram Maxim, the world-famous inventor, said to the AMERICAN today: "It would be an extremely good thing for everybody if America would simply step in and stop all this trouble in Mexico and really annex it to the United States.

"But Americans don't want to do that because of what South Americans would say.

"Do the Americans think that the various South American nations might say, 'Is it our turn next?'

"But the United States is in a different position from any other nation, and we can trust to them that annexation would be a very good thing for Mexico and a good thing for the States."

former stanch friend and supporter, General Blanquet. When Blanquet approached Madero with an ultimatum that he resign, the fiery President attempted to draw a revolver, but Blanquet struck him in the face, knocking him to the floor.

General Huerta has sent an official note to Ambassador Henry Lane Wilson, representing the United States, and to the other foreign envoys, promising a speedy restoration of peace. Huerta also issued a proclamation to the Mexican public in which he said:

The Mexican government has been taken from the administration of Francisco Madero and from the hands of the Madero family, and we promise that peace will be restored in the capital and throughout the republic at the earliest possible moment. Outlawry perpetrated in the future under guise of revolutionary movements will be put down with a strong hand. The new government asks the co-operation of all classes to establish order so that our country may enjoy its former prosperity.

Guarantee Civic Liberties.

The unsettling and distressing situation through which the capital of the republic has passed obliged the army to unite on a basis of fraternity to achieve the salvation of the country.

In consequence the nation may rest assured that all civic liberties compatible with good order are guaranteed under the responsibilities of the signatories, who have assumed charge of the administration of the department and command of the military forces in case by so is necessary to afford full guarantees to Mexican citizens and foreign residents.

Within seventy-two hours the situation will have improved. It is hoped to the point where civil law may take the place of military.

The army invites the people, on whom it relies, to continue in the noble attitude of respect and consideration they have hitherto observed.

It also invites all revolutionary factions to unite for the consolidation of national peace.

Bunting Hides Scars.

Throughout the entire affair Ambassador Wilson took the part of a friendly adviser and assisted in every way to bring the factions together upon a basis of understanding.

Some of the conferences of Huerta and Diaz were held in the United States embassy.

The Mexican Herald, an English newspaper, was issued today for the first time in three days. As a signal for relocking as well as to hide the scars of war, sol- diers were directed over the National palace and arsenal.

Porfirio to Be Adviser.

There was a repeated recurrence of the report that Porfirio Diaz, former president of the republic, whose government was overthrown by Madero, will be recalled as "special adviser" to the government.

General Huerta will put on array in the field to stamp down the insurrection of rebel leaders who have designs upon the presidency.

Among the rebel leaders who, it is believed, will refuse to recognize the Huerta government are Emilio Vasquez, who has proclaimed himself provisional President of Mexico and is organizing an army along the Rio Grande; Emilio Zapata, who refused to enter Mexico City to aid Diaz with his rebel bandit horde; Pascual Orozco, Jr., who seeks to be President of Mexico, and Inez Salazar, whose forces have spent their time burning and plundering in northern Mexico under cloak of revolutionary operations.

Several members of Madero's cabinet who remained loyal to the former President are detained in the national palace as "hostages to their country."

Killed for Refusing to Cheer.

Marco Hernandez, a brother of the Minister of the Interior, Rafael Hernandez, was killed in the street last night by bandits, when, at the command of a crowd, he refused to cry "Viva Huerta."

His shout of "Viva Madero" was answered by the revolvers of the rurales. He was killed instantly.

The building occupied by the Nueva Era, a newspaper organ of the Madero administration, was burned last night by a mob. Throngs of men, women and children seemingly are popular approval by the sudden change in affairs today by crowding the big square in front of the National Palace and deliriously shouting "Viva" for the three principals and for Manuel Mondragon, who had been conducting the Diaz military operations.

Juan Arcos, private secretary to Madero, escaped from the city in an automobile when Huerta and Blanquet carried their coup d'etat.

The city was virtually placed under martial law when mobs swept through several streets last night breaking into buildings and pillaging stores and dwellings. Huerta placed rurales at the disposition of banking companies to guard their property.

Word of cleaning up the streets has begun. Thoroughfares in the line of fire between the National Palace and the arsenal are strewn with wreckage and deadbodies.

Suarez Attempts Suicide.

Red Cross and White Cross aids worked all night caring for the wounded and preparing the dead for burial.

It is estimated that it will cost $10,000,000 to repair the damage done to the city, not counting the money which must be paid out for destruction of foreign property and for the killing of foreigners.

Vice-President Jose Pino Suarez, arrested with Madero, is reported to have attempted to commit suicide. He is constantly under guard of a soldier.

The National Congress was summoned to meet today to select a successor to Madero. Under the Mexican constitution Congress must appoint Madero's successor Secretary of State before he can succeed Madero as President. It is believed that General Huerta will be chosen.

The reaction from the long artillery battle which has raged in the city set in today. Great crowds thronged the streets and many carried away bullets and pieces of shrapnel for souvenirs.

"Viva Diaz" and "Viva Huerta!" rang through the streets. Madero was burned in effigy by a party of exuberant military cadets. Thus passed away the glory and honor of the man who entered the National Palace upon a wave of public acclaim two years ago.

Refuses to Stop Firing.

A significant feature of the coup was the absence of Senor de la Barra as an actor in it. Just a few days ago De la Barra seemed sure to be chosen the successor of Madero.

General Angeles, who had charge of one of the federal batteries, was locked up in solitary confinement preparatory to court-martial because he would not cease firing upon the arsenal after Madero had resigned.

The overthrow of Madero cost heavily in human life. It is believed when an accurate roll of the casualties is taken it will be found that over 12,000 soldiers and noncombatants were killed or wounded in the "ten days' fighting."

The situation on the western coast has become so threatening that the British cruiser Sirius has been ordered to Acapulco from Vera Cruz. Fighting is also going on yet at Matamoras.

Colonel Pasquale Orozco, Sr., and Colonel Andres Garza Galan declare they will continue the rebellion unless another than Huerta rules, preferably De la Barra or General Geronimo Treviño.

The coup d'etat at the National Palace created a sensation which has by no means subsided.

General Huerta, commander of the Federal troops, was proclaimed provisional President, with the acquiescence of General Felix Diaz.

In a speech from the balcony of the palace General Huerta declared he had no personal ambitions and proclaimed himself as military governor and General Blanquet as military commander of the Federal district.

About the time Madero was seized by Blanquet, his brother, Gustavo Madero, ex-Minister of Finance, was arrested by General Huerta, who was dining with him in a public restaurant.

All the members of the Cabinet were placed under arrest, with the exception of Ernesto Madero, the uncle of the President, who held the portfolio of finance. He was ignored in the extensive changes in the government and managed to make his escape.

Blanquet Starts Plot.

The direct movement against Madero was the result of a plot which possibly existed with Blanquet for many days.

From the first it had been known that General Blanquet was unwilling to fight. His men were of the same mind. He held complete command over them, and it was not doubted that they would follow him in any adventure.

Blanquet drew his men up in order and delivered a stirring speech.

"The inhuman battle must end," he said. "The time has come when some drastic means must be taken to stop a conflict in which father is killing son and brother is fighting against brother, when noncombatants are sharing the fate of war —and all this because of the caprice of one man."

Blanquet then issued orders for the arrest of the President and assigned a detachment to that duty. Madero was soon a prisoner in his own rooms.

AMERICAN HAD TO BURY HIS SLAIN WIFE IN A CELLAR

VERA CRUZ, Feb. 19.—No more revolting act of barbarity can be found in the annals of warfare on the American continent than the deliberate violation of the armistice by the Madero forces on Sunday and the consequences of that act, according to uncensored dispatches received here.

When it was announced that there would be no firing for a stated period the American and other non-combatants came forth from their hiding places to take the air and repair their abodes against a resumption of the firing. At the time when most of the people were in the streets Madero attempted to take advantage of the lull to move his heavier guns nearer to the arsenal and to dynamite the sewers leading to the Diaz household.

His forces had made little progress with these tasks before they were discovered by the Diaz sharpshooters posted on the highest buildings in the area under Diaz's control.

In the next moment the crowds in the streets were amazed to hear spitting bullets from the direction of the arsenal and before they had time to flee the guns of the National Palace were thundering also, raking the section between the palace and the arsenal with a crashing, devastating fire of cannon ball and shrapnel. The rebels returned in kind and the armistice that promised safe refuge to citizens had suddenly become even more deadly bombardment than any of the eight days past.

Groups of people were caught here and there in the narrow streets and mowed down by machine guns, which seemed to have been fired with little thought for the position of the enemy.

Buried in Cellar.

In the midst of the excitement house in a few blocks from the arsenal is the grave of Mrs. E. W. Holmes, one of the two American women killed in the fighting by the entrance into her home of a shell.

For three days, her grief-stricken husband, unable to remove the body, kept vigil with the corpse rather than leave it to possible, further mutilation. On the night of the third day soldiers entered his apartment and before his eyes robbed the place. When they had gone he managed to find boards and carpenter's tools in the building and he himself constructed a coffin, in which he laid the body of his wife. He carried it into the basement and there dug and filled her grave.

This is an incident known to many American residents who have arrived here. No less frightful scenes, however, have been those of many Mexicans, especially among the poorer classes.

POWERS FORCED TAFT TO ACT TO SAVE MONROE DOCTRINE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—The great nations of Europe, through their diplomatic representatives in Washington, have served notice upon the United States that steps must be taken to restore peace in Mexico or openly announce to the world that the Monroe Doctrine has been abandoned.

This information comes to the AMERICAN from an authority so close to the administration that it cannot be questioned. It supplies the reasons for the hurried war preparations and dispatch of troops and ships to the Mexican coast.

Five Days Prevail.

German, British and Belgian representatives have made frequent visits to the State Department and the White House. They refuse to talk for publication, for the obvious reason that the conferences being held represent great consequences. It is said that within about twenty-four hours a demand has been made upon President Taft which amounts to an ultimatum.

War Preparations Go On.

As a result the report of the arrest of Madero has in no way interfered with the war preparations. Neither Secretary Stimson or Secretary of the Navy Meyer has issued any orders that will stop the movement of battleships and marines.

The State Department believes that the enforced resignation of President Madero makes the situation considerably more difficult and that the administration of General Huerta will be brief. Additional obstacles in the path of peace south of the Rio Grande are the pretensions of Generals Orozco, Salazar, Zapata and the other revolutionary leaders to the reins of government. They do not regard Huerta either as a very strong man or as a capable ruler.

Need Another Porfirio.

It is feared that until another Porfirio Diaz is seated in the castle at Chapultepec there will be no peace in Mexico and that foreigners will be subjected to all manner of attacks and insults by revolutionaries throughout the republic. For this reason the United States will not move its battleships from Mexican waters for at least a fortnight, while the entire Atlantic fleet will probably be kept at Guantanamo, Cuba, ready for intervention until the latter part of March.

Secretary Knox read the early press reports from Mexico City with grave concern, but declined to make any comment.

In the meantime orders were telegraphed by Quartermaster-General Aleshire to the depot quartermaster in San Francisco to have the transports Sheridan, Beauford and Sherman get into commission immediately for use in handling troops on the west coast of Mexico.

SIBLEY HELPED SENATOR BAILEY MAKE $200,000

FRANKLIN, Pa., Feb. 19.—Former Congressman Joseph C. Sibley, testifying before Commissioner R. J. McNeill, representing the Clapp investigating committee, declared that he had given advice to Senator Bailey of Texas which enabled the "statesman" to make $200,000. Sibley, who has been referred to as the Standard Oil Company's "little political spy" in Congress, gave his testimony in a bank here with a physician standing by him as he talked. Sibley denied that he ever gave a dollar to Senator Bailey and that he ever financed the Senator's land operations in the South.

The questioning of Sibley was the result of the revelations made by William Randolph Hearst in publishing the famous "Archbold letters." The testimony demanded of Sibley concerned chiefly the statements of the letters. The purpose of the commissioner's visit here was, to have Sibley identify photographic copies of the letters and to answer questions about campaign contributions. The former Congressman, however, took advantage of the opportunity to explain his relations with Senator Bailey and to seek to justify his actions while in public life. Sibley said:

When I go before the great judge I shall have plenty of things to answer for, but never for my public acts which always reflected my best efforts. I always acted unselfishly and with sole regard to my conscience and to my country.

Sibley said that he had been either president or chairman of the board of directors of the subsidiary companies of the Standard Company from 1879 until 1910, when he retired. Asked if he had made contributions to the campaigns of 1904, 1908 and 1912, he said that so long as he was in Washington he usually made the first contribution to the Congressional committee. He never contributed on behalf of the Standard Oil Company, but made personal contributions, he said.

In the Hearst letters in which reference is made to "Senator B.", Sibley was not asked to whom he referred. He did not volunteer to give the Senator's name.

Man of 70 Asks Court to Protect Him from His Wife

In addition to filing a libel for divorce, Morris M. Greenberg, who runs a fish market at No. 114 Porter street, East Boston, has asked Judge Hardy in the Superior Court to issue an injunction restraining his wife, twenty years his junior, from interfering with him or threatening him.

Greenberg married December 12, 1910. He says his wife is strong and vigorous and has threatened him with bodily harm and in many instances attempted to do him injury. Judge Hardy directed an order of notice to issue, returnable February 26, on the prayer for an injunction.

'PAY THE FULL PRICE, MY CREED,' MRS. CHASE TELLS ANGELA MORGAN

ANGELA MORGAN

Yesterday Angela Morgan told of Mrs. Chase, the insurgent, in revolt against the customs, dress, ideals and restrictions of society; of her visit to Mrs. Chase's lonely farmhouse in Alstead, N. H., where she, with her two children and her "spiritual affinity," Hartley Dennett, are living and working in accord with Tolstoi's principles. Today Miss Morgan gives the ten articles of Mrs. Chase's Creed, which answer the old-world question, "What Price Shall a Woman Pay?"

By ANGELA MORGAN.

What price shall a woman pay? How far should she sacrifice herself, her children, her future, in order to live her own life as she sees it, regardless of the world's opinions?

This is the question that kept uppermost through my talk with Mrs. Chase and with the natives of East Alstead, the little New Hampshire village where this strange woman, with her two children and Hartley Dennett, is living the life of a toiling peasant.

Mrs. Chase has come before the public as the most astonishing figure in all the matrimonial tragicles that have shocked society within the past few years. The Upton Sinclairs, the Ferdinand Earles, the Craig-Weatherbys, the Cheneys of Chicago—all these famous cases pale into comparative insignificance beside this most striking instance of a woman and her soul mate who, finding the world hostile to their ideals, have utterly dropped away from the world, taking with them the woman's children, visited from time to time by the husband, and enjoying the highest type of spiritual approval of their partnership.

Here is a woman who, since her spiritual affinity came into her life, has been moved to change completely all her ideals, her standards, her customs, her very habits of living. Existence for her has undergone a revolution such as happens to few people in a million through life.

Born and reared in an atmosphere of charm and luxury and cultivation, she has deliberately chosen a life of hardship and strenuous toil on a farm in the bleak New Hampshire hills. Not only this, she has taken her children with her into that world.

"What sacrifice shall a woman make?

There is no limit to the sacrifice, says Mrs. Chase. Martyrdom, she declares that to her it is no sacrifice; that she prefers her present life to her past, and that she never knew till now what living in its fullness means.

Does Rough Farm Work.

Sharp indeed is the contrast between the present and that past. Then she had servants to wait on her. Now she declares it is wrong to have servants, and with her own hands does the roughest work on the farm. Then she wore trailing, pretty gowns, with all the frills and accessories dear to the feminine heart. Now she wears an old costume that makes her look like a farmer youth. Her hair is plainly brushed, her throat is bare, she has discarded every feminine allurement. Once a handsome woman, handsomely arrayed, she now cares nothing whatever for her appearance. Still further the contrast grows, sharper and stranger as one looks at it. Once she had an almost painful dread of draughts and cold weather. Now she declares that she is satisfied with a farmhouse lacking hot running water, where work is difficult and almost primitive in its methods. Water must be fetched from the pump or the spring, and that means many steps in the winter time.

Once she had her teas and her receptions and her theatres and parties. Now she has the companionship of the simplest village folk, and their greatest excitement is in reading to them, fencing them and giving them of her hospitality. Once she was surrounded by city dwellings and libraries and theatres and tempting shops—all the attractions of a city. Now she is surrounded by bleak, cold hills, shut in by snow, with the nearest railroad twelve miles away.

Little Mary Has a Lamb.

Not only this, in cutting herself off from the outside world, she has also cut her children off. They share with her the life of sacrifice and discomfort. She has taken them from their old associates in Brookline, and from the schools where their early life was spent. Now she sends them to a little country school two miles away from the farm. Here their companions are the children of the simplest villagers.

"We like it!" both children declared to me. "Oh, it is all so much better than in Brookline. We love to walk two miles to school. And we love the farm. You see, there are so many animals."

"Yes," added Heman, the son, with joyous eyes. "We have lambs to play with. Each one of us has a lamb. It's fine to live in the country."

"Mary has a lamb, has she?" They laughed when they saw the point.

"But she doesn't take it to school!" triumphed Heman, with sparkling eyes.

Mary, the daughter, who seems eleven years old, wears bloomers like her mother. She is dressed as simply as any farmer child. Heman wears overalls, which he highly prizes. Farmers wear them, and he will be a true farmer! He delights in his attire as any normal lad would.

Tells What She Believes.

What is the creed of Mrs. Chase? Just what does she believe about life? What religion is it that urged her to blaze a brand new path for herself and her children?

Here is her rule of life, as I gathered it from our firelight talk and from the neighbors who, while marvelling over the strange partnership between Mrs. Chase and Hartley Dennett, spoke only with the greatest reverence of both:

LIVE ABSOLUTELY TRUE TO THE HIGHEST THING YOU BELIEVE.

This, in a nutshell, expresses what this remarkable woman thinks and lives.

One of the things she believes is, that it is wrong to degrade any human being by making a servant of him. "I have had my servants and my life of idleness. I shall never consent to it again," she says. "I have gone through all that artificiality and I am done with it forever. No servant shall ever walk upon me. I can and shall work for myself. My children shall work. Everyone who comes into my home must work."

Another thing she believes is that there is no accident to chance in life. Everything happens in accordance with law. If one human being touches the life of another, it is not chance that brings them together. It is law.

This she says of all friendships and affinities and human associations. In the words of Emerson, "If we are related, we shall meet." Thus, to Mrs. Chase firmly believes.

Here are the ten articles of her CREED:

Ten Articles in Her Creed

1.—Be willing to pay the full price of your beliefs. Let no one share you price. The opinions of other people do not matter. Do what YOU think is right.

2.—Stick to your principles, even to the ruin of your fortune. Be a Martin Luther if necessary, but once you take a stand, stick to it.

3.—Realize that all friendships and meetings in this world are destiny, that nothing "happens." There is no such thing as chance. LAW governs the universe.

4.—What if you must sacrifice? Sacrifice is nothing. There is no sacrifice too great to make for Truth.

5.—The gospel of work will save any man. Work is the great savior of the world.

6.—Go back to the soil, go back to Nature, for the healing which an artificial life has failed to give. Nature will restore you to yourself.

7.—Serve all men and forget self completely. Only in the forgetfulness of self can we truly find ourselves.

8.—Let no man serve you as a menial. Each man should do his work for himself, should be willing to do the meanest tasks.

9.—Love your neighbor as yourself and know that all are one.

10.—The simple life may be the highest, richest life of all. Only in casting off all artificiality can we know life in its fullness.

Tomorrow I will tell of Mrs. Chase the humanitarian, working for the good of the villagers, and of the wonderful stories told me by the children. We love to walk, she, her tell and her startling interjections, hidden from the public until now.

SIMPLE RECIPES FOR BEAUTY AND HEALTH

BLOOD CLEANSER—A harmless blood-tonic cleanses the system of impurities, rebuilds waste tissue and fortifies the sanitary disease and a course of this treatment restores health and vigor to the body and gives to the complexion a charm and clearness. To prepare, dissolve one-half ounce of sugar in a half-pint alcohol, (not whisker) then stir in one ounce barbino and enough hot water to make a pint. A tablespoonful before meals is the dose.

EFFECTIVE HAIR TONIC—Quinine is recognized as the most helpful remedy for dandruff and falling hair. You can make the best mixture known at your home by dissolving one ounce quinine, dissolve in ½ pint alcohol (not whisker) and add same amount of water. Rub gently into scalp at least once a week. It will kill dandruff entirely, make the hair grow good and a healthy head which will produce an abundance of beautiful hair.

EYE BEAUTIFIER AND REMEDY—Where weak, tired and worn-out eyes, women have tired your eyes and forced them to burn or turn red, you should use a few drops of cyrobin tonic, which is known to be the most soothing and healing lotion for dull, weak, inflamed, watery or overworked eyes. It not only cures but strengthens the muscles and nerves, giving lustre, expression, strength and health. Dissolve one ounce cyrobin in one pint pure water. Put two or three drops in each eye occasionally.

TO MAKE HAIRS VANISH—With water and dextrose mix enough paste to cover hairy surface thickly. Apply, and after two or three minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This method does not disorder the skin and usually one application is sufficient.

PSYCHIC TEST NEXT FOR MAN WHO GOES TO LOOK FOR A JOB

Mr. Employer, when you wanted a man for a job, you advertised, stating qualifications, and "sized up" the applicants by the light of your knowledge of human nature.

Professor Muensterberg, the Harvard psychology professor, now tells you that yours is not the right way to hire help. He has a deductive method. It shows:

The type of the applicant's attention.

The strength of his different emotions.

His disposition to fatigue.

His memory and will energy.

His space sense and his time sense.

His ability to learn, his judgment and his power to discriminate.

His type of imagery.

By a series of mental tests, Professor Muensterberg says he can tell, in a room alone with a would-be motorman, whether he will do on the front platform.

RESCUE FIVE IN GENERAL ALARM FIRE IN SALEM

Four children and a man were rescued by policemen and firemen, several families were driven to the street and two two-story blocks in the tenement district and a stable were destroyed by a general alarm fire in Salem early today. Help was summoned from Peabody. The flames threatened other buildings in the vicinity, including the business block of the Salem Electric Light Company. Eleven horses were rescued from the burned stable.

The four children lived — the second floor of one of the blocks. With their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Maloff, they were asleep at the time. Firemen broke down the doors and carried the youngsters, who were practically without clothing, through the smoke-filled hallways to the street. They were cared for at the homes of neighbors. Most of the tenants of the buildings lost everything they possessed.

The fire started in a barber shop under the block. Within ten minutes after the first apparatus arrived a general alarm was sounded, as the danger to nearby tenements was great.

The flames spread to a stable in the rear of the tenement block. Eleven horses were led to places of safety. Seven of the horses are owned by the John P. Squire Company of Cambridge and three by McLean & Co., produce merchants of Salem. The loss here is estimated at $7,000.

CIVIL WAR COMING, SAYS MISS HARRADEN

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—The militant methods in England by the suffragettes is but the beginning of a great civil war, which is making the world recognize their cause, and besides being of great educational value, have forced the legislators to pass some excellent laws, according to Miss Beatrice Harraden, the novelist, who arrived here from London for a lecture tour. Miss Harraden says the lawmakers have broken their words to the suffragettes constitutions said that Major Hurley was so often, militant methods will have to be used the world over.

MAYOR HURLEY IS AUCTIONEER TONIGHT

John F. Hurley, Mayor of Salem, will play a new role tonight when at eight o'clock he begins to auction the stock of dry goods in the store of Max Winer on Essex street, Salem. Hurley will wear his plug hat. Some say that the reason he is doing this novel stunt tonight is because he was criticized several weeks ago by the City Council when he loaned an auctioneer's license to himself. Three councilors said that Major Hurley was not a bonafide auctioneer. "Come and see me on the job tonight," says Hurley.

TELLS NEED OF PENSION PLAN FOR WIDOWS

The discussion following Mayor Fitzgerald's suggestion that all widows with children be pensioned has created a universal interest among the readers of the AMERICAN. Probably no matter of public welfare has met with more general approval in these columns.

It is not generally known that there is a widow's pension now in force in Germany. The child of a widow there is also paid a pension until he is eighteen. This is a similar arrangement to our navy pension system under which a soldier's children under sixteen are paid $2 per month until the institution is reached.

Contributions continue to pour in and it is the earnest wish of the AMERICAN that this publicity will bring to the attention of the legislative bodies the need of such a pension as Mayor Fitzgerald has suggested. Even the opinion of those opposed to the plan will be welcomed.

Here is a letter from Frances Yarrin Cohen of No. 43 Magnolia street, Malden:

Commends Pension Plan.

Editor AMERICAN—Mayor Fitzgerald's plan for pensioning widows with children should be highly commended by every citizen. There is no greater pain for a mother than to either be compelled to give her children up or to neglect them.

A mother forced to have her children to the mercies of the street, or strangers, while she is rearing enough to keep their souls and bodies together, suffers the bitterest anguish imaginable, and if through lack of care and love (because she is helpless) the child errs, and her she is taken away from the mother, the aching void left in that mother's heart can never be cured or forgotten.

Surely the mother who walks through the Valley of Death in delivering a child to the world, has a right to feel that she will not, through necessity demands, to keep and bring up that child as she would like to.

Dyspepsia Creates Queer Sensations

To Get Rid of that Bloated, Inflated Stomach Pressure Use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets After Eating.

Ever meet that sad-eyed man who tells you the earth is tottering on its axis? He is a dyspeptic. If he has not yet been removed from office by the argument induce him to use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets for a few days. Watch the change. He will soon pronounce a funny story, he will go so far as to admit that some cooks are better than others; he will even accept an invitation to a banquet.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain nothing but natural elements necessary to digestion, and when placed at work in the weak stomach and small intestines, soon supply what these organs need to stimulate the gastric glands and gradually bring the digestive organs back to their normal condition.

There is no secret in the preparation of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They are the most popular of all remedies for indigestion, dyspepsia, waterbrash, insomnia, loss of appetite, melancholia, constipation, dysentery and other kindred disease, originating from improper dissolution and assimilation of foods, because they are thoroughly reliable and harmless to man or child.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are at once a safe and a powerful remedy, they will digest your food for you when your stomach can't.

Ask your druggist for a fifty-cent box.

CASSIDY TO TALK TO THREE BIG PURE FOOD SHOWS IN NEW ENGLAND

Mr. Cassidy today discusses the Pure Food Show now in progress in Providence, which is drawing the attention of those interested in pure foods throughout New England. The Providence show is the first of three. The others are to be held in Portland and in Worcester. Mr. Cassidy will speak at each of these shows. He speaks today in Providence.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

In the fight for pure food, there is no more effective agency than the Pure Food Shows, which are becoming popular.

The food show has several functions.

It generates public interest in food topics.

It educates the people to the necessity for pure foods.

It passed upon by the committee conducting the show.

It guides the consumer in the task of securing foods of the purest quality.

It serves, if properly conducted, to identify those firms and companies which are marketing pure foods.

There are three important food shows scheduled for the next few weeks in New England. The first is now in progress in Providence. Another will be held in Portland, and a third in Worcester. In each case the women's clubs are chiefly instrumental in organizing the shows.

The Providence show opened February 17, in Infantry Hall, Providence. It is given by the Rhode Island and Providence Retail Grocers' Association, under the auspices of the Rhode Island State Federation of Women's Clubs. Many speakers have been secured, and there are scores of exhibits of pure food. Each exhibit has been

Value of Food Show.

I expect to speak at the show this afternoon and also on the evening of February 27. I am also invited to speak today to the employes of the American Locomotive Works in Providence.

The food show, in the first few days of the week, has drawn tremendous crowds to Infantry Hall. The number at the opening session was estimated at 3,000, and the attendance has since increased.

I have not yet inspected the exhibits at the Providence food show, at the time this is written. Therefore, I cannot attempt to comment at any length upon the food samples displayed. But the mere question of what foods are displayed, and whether they are in reality pure foods, is not the question of prime importance. The real value of a food show lies in its recognition of the ideal of Pure Food. When the solidity of consumers have begun to take [illegible] interest in their foods, the problem of food purity will be solved. The food show does serve to awaken this interest and to stimulate it.

The Providence food show, so far as I can judge from the program, is paying particular attention to this educational side of the problem of pure food. This problem has two phases—the purchasing end, and the preparing end. That is, the housewife must first learn how to discriminate in her purchases between pure and impure foods; and, secondly, she must learn the proper use of those foods in her kitchen.

Hints for Housewives.

Under these two classes of education, the titles of the different lectures at the Providence show naturally fall. For instance, on the purchasing end, the housewife should get valuable information from these lectures:

"What the Grocers' Associations Are Doing for the Consumer."

Demonstration Tests for Preservatives in Foods."

"Food Swindlers I Have Met."

"Milk."

A lecture by William Goodwin, Rhode Island sealer of weights and measures.

A lecture by Professor E. P. Gorham of the Rhode Island Shell Fish Commission.

"What Providence Had Done for Pure Foods."

"Government Food Inspection."

"Federal Meat Inspection."

Those are all topics full of possibilities for the housewife. If properly treated, they should present a vast fund of information about impurities in foods, and what foods not to buy.

Dr. Goudiss to Talk.

In this connection, one of the most interesting and valuable lectures should be that of Dr. C. Houston Goudiss, publisher of the Expert Magazine, which has been called "America's Pure Food Champion." This devotes much space to the interests of purity of foods. Dr. Goudiss is a Philadelphia man with whom I have been closely associated, and he is familiar with every phase of the fight against rotten, drugged, mutilated or adulterated foods. His topic has not been announced, but I understand he will talk chiefly on the work of Dr. Wiley and tell of the food frauds Dr. Wiley has exposed.

In addition to the lectures listed above, there are others dealing with various phases of the problem, "How to Prepare Food." I make no pretense to expert knowledge in this direction. I believe this is a field in which most New England women are experts themselves. Nevertheless, the different talks should give every housewife valuable hints, new recipes and new ideas.

The Providence food show, like every other food show conducted along the proper lines, should be of great interest to every housewife.

Hearing is Postponed.

Owing to this show in Providence and my engagement to speak there, I have arranged for a postponement of the hearing upon my bill to strike the word "knowingly" from the penalty clause in the present law prohibiting adulterations of liquors.

The word has no right to appear in any pure food law. But it has been argued that the question of pure whiskey is not properly a pure food question, and the proposition to strike out the word should be fought out along strictly pure food lines.

There are a number of other bills before the Legislature intended to strike out the word in laws pertaining directly to pure foods. The hearings on these bills will occur in the course of the next few weeks. Therefore, the whiskey hearing will be postponed until the question of the word "knowingly" has been thrashed out before the Public Health Committee.

The policy of the present Legislature toward this word is the most important policy, from a pure food point of view, to be determined this year. After this policy has been indicated by legislative action, the question of applying the word to the whiskey and liquor law will be taken up.

MRS. FLORENCE A. JENNESS, (above) and William E. Miller, two of three Somerville people in perplexing marital tangle that courts must straighten out.

COURT MUST UNTIE QUEER MARITAL KNOT

Is Florence Ada Jenness the wife of Walter G. Jenness, a wealthy lumber merchant, whose home is at No. 103 Pearson avenue, Somerville, or is she his stepdaughter?

Is William Edward Miller of No. 32A Gilman street, Somerville, lawfully wedded to Florence Ada Jenness.

These two questions, which are being debated by Somerville folks, will have to be settled by the courts, for a divorce libel and a bigamy charge figures in matrimonial tangle.

Florence Jenness in declaring that she is not the wife of the lumber merchant, is compatible in the statement that she is not the mother of his eight-year-old son. What's more, she says she's only twenty-five, while Jenness is equally certain that Florence Ada is forty-two.

Don't Cut Reference to Drew.

Miller and he was married to Florence Ada Jenness in Somerville, January 30 by a justice of the peace. An investigation proved the fact that a marriage intention was filed at the Somerville city clerk's office January 25, and that a marriage license was issued on the 30th.

Mrs. Jenness, however, insists that the woman is her wife. She declares that she was married to Florence Ada in Dover, N. H., August 2, 1902 by the Rev. George L. Collier, now a retired Methodist minister. When Florence Ada left his house, Jenness says she told him she was going to New Hampshire on a visit. He got the George G. Drew Detective Agency to keep track of Florence Ada. The detectives did. They traced Florence Ada to Quispee, N. H. and then followed them back to No. 100 Main street, Charlestown, where, it is said, they are now living.

When interviewed Florence Ada Jenness, or Florence Ada Miller said:

"My stepfather ordered me to leave his house. I had a perfect right to marry Mr. Miller because I am not Mr. Jenness' wife. He married my mother and was her second husband. My right maiden name is Ada Florence Burell. The eight year old son is an adopted child. It is not mine.

I love Mr. Miller. He is my husband," Miller said: "Maybe I was deceived but I'm going to stick by this little girl to the end."

Terrible Story May Be Revealed By Scott's Diary

LONDON, Feb. 19.—Despite the official version given of the manner in which Petty Officer Edgar Evans met his death while returning with Captain Scott's party from the South Pole, stories continue to be repeated emanating from Australia, which say that stupendous revelations will be made if the true story of the sacrifice and suffering in Scott's tragedy is ever made public.

Information just received in London states that the private diary of Captain Scott contains a ghastly story of Evans' death, which he left to Mrs. Scott, she also to decide whether the detailed history of the calamity should be given to the public.

It is reiterated here that Scott's reference to Evans' astonishing failure and emphasis on his "natural death" gives a clew to the real story.

To Get Rid of Wrinkles and Bad Complexions

(From Beauty's Mirror.)

It is more important now than during the period of profuse perspiration, to keep the pores clean. All cosmetics clog the pores. It cannot fail interfere greatly with elimination of waste material, injuring instead of aiding the complexion. Ordinary medicated wax serves all the purposes of creams, powders and rouges, giving far better results. It actually peels off as a cleansing skin, at the same time unclogging the pores. Minute particles of exact skin come off day by day, causing not the least pain or discomfort. Gradually the healthy, youngerskin beneath peeps out, and in less than a fortnight you have a lovelier complexion than you ever dreamed of acquiring. Mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is spread on nightly like cold cream and washed off morning. Any one using it suffers.

For removing wrinkles, without stopping the pores with pasty stuff, here's a never-failing remedy: An ounce of powdered saxolite, dissolved in a pint witch hazel. Bathe the face in this daily for a while; every line will vanish completely. Even the first application gives surprising results.

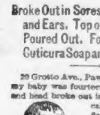
BABY BURNED AND ITCHED TERRIBLY

Broke Out in Sores. Spread over Face and Ears. Top of Head Raw. Water Poured Out. Formed Thick Crust. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.



29 Grosto Ave., Pawtucket, R. I.—"When my baby was fourteen months old his face and head broke out in sores. His eyes became swollen and inflamed and then the inflammation spread all over his face, and ears and the top of his head was fairly raw. It started with pimples and then water would pour out and that would form a thick crust, and when he cried this crust would crack and blood would come, too. It kept getting worse. He would keep me up part of the night crying and scratching till the blood would run down his neck and ears. I had to wrap his hands with rags so he would not scratch himself. His suffering was terrible. The eruption burned and itched terribly and made him cross and he could not sleep. He had sores on his chin and back of the ears and all the top of his head was one thick crust. I had to cut his hair to the cross.

"I was told baby had eczema. A friend came in one day and told me to try Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, which I did. The second week he was entirely well. Two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment cured my baby." (Signed) Mrs. Mary Richard, Apr. 22, 1912.

ONE-HALF BOTTLE OF THE GREAT KIDNEY REMEDY ACCOMPLISHES WONDERS

When I sent for a sample bottle of Swamp-Root, I was in great distress day and night. Before I received sample by mail, I went to our best doctor (and he is second to none in this vicinity) and told him how I felt. He gave me a bottle of medicine. I was about a week taking the medicine, but was no better than when I began. I then began your sample bottle, and before I got through with it I felt a change. The scalding sensation did not bother only a few times in the middle of the day. I would not have believed such a small quantity would have done so much, but before it was gone I learned that our druggist kept Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and so got a large bottle for one dollar but actually worth one hundred dollars. I only took one large tablespoonful three times a day, and before I had taken one-half bottle I was all right and have been since. Gratefully yours,

SURELY TAKE "SYRUP OF FIGS" IF HEADACHY, BILIOUS, CONSTIPATED

Sweetens your stomach, clears your head and thoroughly cleanses your liver and 30 feet of bowels of sour bile, foul gases and clogged-up waste.

All those days when you feel miserable, headachy, bilious and dull are due to torpid liver and sluggish bowels. The days when your stomach is sour and full of gas, when you have indigestion; the nights when your nerves twitch and you are restless and can't sleep could be avoided with a teaspoonful of delicious Syrup of Figs. Isn't it foolish to be distressed when there is such a pleasant way to overcome it.

Give your inactive liver and ten yards of waste-clogged bowels a thorough cleansing this time. Put an end to constipation.

Take a teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs tonight, sure, and 'just see for yourself by morning how gently but thoroughly all the sour bile, undigested fermenting food and clogged-up waste matter is moved on and out of your system—no nausea—no griping—no sickness.

You simply can't have your liver inactive and your thirty feet of bowels constipated with sour, decaying waste matter and feel well. The need of a laxative is a natural need, but with delicious Syrup of Figs you are not drugging yourself. Being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics, it cannot injure.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna." Refuse, with scorn, any of the so-called Fig Syrup imitations. They are meant to deceive you. Look on the label. The genuine, old reliable bears the name, California Fig Syrup Company.

STAR ATHLETES TO COMPETE IN BIG MEET HERE

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.
(Quarter-mile champion of United States and Canada.)

The New England championship meeting, in which will be held in Mechanics Building Friday evening, February 28, promises to be one of the best set of races that has been conducted in this city this year. Although many of the outside colleges will not be represented in relay races, the strictly events will furnish plenty of competition for the local sport followers, and already speculation is rife over the outcome of the different events. There is much feeling over the fact that the winners of the different events will be the indoor champions for the coming year.

This is the first set of games which the New England A. A. U. has conducted indoors for a number of years, and there has been a great deal of interest in all indoor contests during the season, the attendance at the coming meeting of champions should be a record breaker.

The forty-yard dash will prove a classy feature, as this will witness the appearance of Howard P. Drew, the colored flier from Springfield. This will be Drew's first appearance in Boston this Winter, as he did not compete at the B. A. A. games. He will compete against Charley Rice of Dowler Point fame and Francis O'Hara, the fleet sprinter of the Unicorn Club. O'Hara has been training for the last two weeks for this race and he is confident of securing a win over either of the other athletes.

He will have to travel, however, to defeat Drew, who should win the event, as he is the fastest man in the world over this distance. It would not be surprising to see a new record for the distance set up, for if there is an athlete in the world who can cover forty yards in 4.1-5s, Drew is the man. He is much faster than W. D. Eaton, the present record holder.

The 300-yard event should be a hummer as every athlete of note in school, college and club circles has entered for this race. This is a popular distance and it will take a number of heats to decide the winner. Freddie Burns, the holder of the 300-yard schoolboy record, is a favorite for the championship at that distance, but Eddie Murphy, who disputes his claims as the fastest man and star is running in rare style.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

TO judge from the baseball columns of the newspapers in the big league cities this year is a heavy one for "holdouts." Within the past few days, however, several stars of the diamond have signed contracts notably Wood, Speaker and Plank, which would seem to indicate that one by one the holdouts are coming into line. The number of players still unsigned is still very large.

Year by year the clubs find it more difficult to agree on terms with their players. The salaries of players were never so high as they are at this present time, and the demands of some of the stars seem beyond all reason.

THERE have been cases recently of several players who made big demands upon the clubs for more salary than their comrades called for, who have not been coaxed to do so. During the major league meetings last week the secretary of one club told this story:

"One of our outfielders was given a raise of salary amounting to several hundred dollars. He promptly sent back his contract unsigned and with a letter saying that he must have more money. We sent him back the contract and also a letter saying that the amount originally named Thereby was our limit.

"A couple of days later the outfielder sent us a very interesting letter. The letter stated that the player would not sign unless he received $1,500 more than our figure. In the very next paragraph the outfielder said that he had decided that $1,200 additional was his lowest figure.

"There, you see, he had shaved $300 off the amount in the space between the reply was sent, and a few days later the player wrote again asking what our decision was. He did not get an answer. Along came another letter from the outfielder, but our policy of silence in the matter was changed. One morning I opened the mail and found the signed contract. The player had been stalling all along."

THE Pittsburg club is one that has adopted the stand-pat idea with its holdouts. When President Dreyfuss returned from the New York meeting he found a letter from Manager Clarke which said:

"I see by the papers that we have some real holdouts in the Pittsburg club. Well, let them hold out; put it up to them to make the first move; we'll play ball whether they report or not. It is my opinion that they will not on hand when they are needed."

Commenting on this letter, Mr. Dreyfuss said:

"Manager Clarke has the right idea. We have offered contracts to all of the players under the Reclassified, and we won't do anything more now till we hear from them. It is the our business to name the salaries, and before we can pay our players, and it is their business to accept or reject them.

"Byrne, who has rejected the contract we sent him, received a large salary last year, nearly all of which was added to the pay little "stake" he had accumulated in his three previous years as a well-paid ball player. He is already a well-to-do young man and gives promise of being rich by the time he quits base ball.

THE Pittsburg president wouldn't admit that such was the case, it is known that both Carey and Hendrix were given a healthy boost in salary this year. Neither, apparently, is satisfied with the amount of the increase.

In a letter to Mr. Dreyfuss Hendrix says that he thinks that his demand for more money must be met before he will affix his name to a contract. He doesn't indicate how much more he wants, nor does Carey or Byrne.

If these players would tell us just what they want," said Mr. Dreyfuss, "we might be able to make progress. But they have not told us a word concerning their plea as to what their services are worth."

IT is not surprising that there should be a difference of opinion among ball players and wise baseball managers as to whether a left hander can play second base. Bonds Davis, Willie Keeler, Clark Griffith and many ball players who were at the meeting in New York thought that Chase would have no trouble in playing that sack, while there were some who were of the opinion that a second baseman would find difficulty in plays which come around that cushion if he had to throw with his left hand.

"I think Hal Chase can play my position on the diamond with the exception of the throw to first," said Connie Mack. "The reason he will be able to play second base is that he is the quickest man with his hands I have seen on the ball field in a long time. He may be a trifle weak at that position, but then, again, he will make some plays down there that a right hander cannot make.

"I think Hal Chase would be much better than some of the right-handed second basemen we have in the game right now. I saw him play that base in Philadelphia, and my players said that they thought he could play anything on the ball lot. There have been many men who have made a success of playing the infield who have been left-handers. But then, again, there have been a few who think Chase is one of them. He will shift with the players, and I think he can touch base on runners.

"Bill Greenwood, who played second base for the Merits way back in 1884, was one of the best second sackers in the business. He was a great ball player. He was a left-hander, but he could play his position as well as any man I ever saw. "Hick" Carpenter was a left-handed third-sacker with the Cincinnati Reds in 1882. Kid Mohler was made a success of playing second base, and he is a left-hander. Willie Keeler broke in as a third baseman, but did not stick to that position."

M'ALEER BACK WITH SPEAKER'S NEW CONTRACT

President James R. McAleer of the Red Sox returned to Boston today wearing a happy smile and carrying Tris Speaker's signed contract in his inside pocket.

"Will Speaker receive $8,000 or $9,000 this year?" was the question naturally fired at McAleer.

"Well," replied the chief of the champions," Speaker is satisfied—yes, pleased—and we are satisfied, too, so it doesn't make much difference whether it is $8,000 or $8,000,000. I wouldn't tell the man. It's Speaker's personal business."

The So president denied the story that he had sent for Speaker to run up to Chicago from Hubbard, Tex., for the purpose of discussing his contract.

"Killed Two Birds With One Stone."

"Speaker and a friend had some personal business in St. Louis," said McAleer. "I wanted to see Jake Stahl in Chicago and sign up Speaker before the Hot Springs season opens, so it was convenient to do both at once. I asked Speaker to meet me there. He came along and we settled the matter in a few minutes.

"Speaker is a very sensible young man. He's the easiest star in the big leagues to get along with, and my own opinion is that he is, all things considered, the most valuable star in the game."

The "Texas Terror" has had a busy Winter looking after his property and making money. Although Speaker is but twenty-four, and has played major league baseball but five years, he has already got most of his salary and invested it wisely, mostly in Texas property. Among other things he owns a section in one of the best farming localities in Texas.

Speaker Well-to-Do.

The Sox star made about $12,000 in baseball last year, nearly all of which was added to the tidy little "stake" he had accumulated in his three previous years as a well-paid ball player. He is already a well-to-do young man and gives promise of being rich by the time he quits base ball.

FAVOR HARVARD OVER YALE IN HOCKEY GAME

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—The Harvard and Yale hockey sevens clash in the second game of their series at the St. Nicholas rink tonight, and a fast and exciting game is expected by the followers of the two teams. Harvard captured the first game of the series, which was played in Boston, and rules a big favorite for the contest tonight.

The Crimson players have shown fine form in the majority of their games this season. They had the honor of twice defeating the Princeton Tigers. Harvard was the only seven which was able to vanquish the speedy sextet led by the mighty "Hobe" Baker.

The six-game should be one of the most interesting that has ever taken place on local ice. Captain Gardner of Harvard has brought on the same team that defeated Princeton so handily in Boston. Captain Harmon of Yale will play the team which began the season so auspiciously until Chauncey and Gore were laid up. These two famous players have rejoined the team.

A new record for sustained road driving under unfavorable conditions was made when William R. McCulla made it at the Pontchartrain Hotel in Detroit with his new Packard "38." He started from Chicago, after being checked out at the new Southern Hotel in that city by J. T. Murphy, the night clerk, at 2:30 a. m. and at 9:39 was checked in by the clerk of the Pontchartrain Hotel.

A distance of 284 miles was covered in seven hours and nine minutes. Three stops were made for gasoline and tires. When occupied fifteen minutes. The actual running time was six hours and fifty-four minutes, and the average speed for the entire distance was more than forty-one miles per hour.

This record is remarkable, considering the frozen condition of the mud and the rutty gravel roads covered, and was a severe test of endurance on the part of both the driver and the car.

"Quietness in a motor," said J. F. Walsh, manager of the Oakland, "means much more than the average automobile user appreciates. It leaves not only add to the pleasure of motoring, but lengthens the life of the car. A noisy car is a nuisance, and should not be tolerated. The building of a quiet car, one that will stay quiet, requires both strength and fine material. If the gears are noiseless you can be sure they have a solid base. Gears do all the work."

One of the most interesting films that has been shown in vaudeville in Boston will be seen at the Park Square Pathe Pictures the largest shipment of automobiles ever made in the world, which was sent from the Buick Motor Company factory at Flint, Mich., to the Howard Auto Company, San Francisco. The moving pictures shows how the cars are loaded into the freight cars for transcontinental shipment and shows a train of seventy-five freight cars starting on this long trip.

The lecture to be given this evening at the Boston Y. M. C. A. Automobile School, No. 288 St. Botolph street, will be of particular interest to owners as well as operators of motor trucks. Nelson S. He will describe with the aid of lantern slides his experiences while directing the "Jumbo" Test" which was conducted by the War Department.

A. SOCKALEXIS

ANDREW SOCKALEXIS, the famous Indian marathoner, hails from Oldtown, Me., and has been competing for three years. He is one of the greatest marathon runners ever turned out in the New England States. He inherits his running as his father was one of the best five-hour champions in Maine thirty years ago.

Sockalexis' greatest achievement was the winning of fourth place in the world's championship marathon race at Stockholm, Sweden. After the race, Mike Murphy took the Indian aside and in his drawling tone of voice said, "Sockalexis, you would have won that race only you were afraid to run. You are the greatest distant runner in the world."

Before going to Sweden Sockalexis had to win a place on the team. He easily accomplished this by his work in the official try-out for the marathon squad which was in the B. A. A. marathon on April 19.

The Indian was a starter in the recent Brooklyn Seagate marathon in New York but he was forced to quit on account of the severe weather conditions.

LO! THE POOR INDIAN IS IN TROUBLE AGAIN

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Lo! the poor Indian is in trouble again. A rumor was in circulation among baseball men yesterday that Jim Thorpe had decided to quit the Giants, with whom he signed a contract several weeks ago. Thorpe did not board McGraw's train at Harrisburg, Sunday night, but Secretary Foster explained yesterday that the Indian had missed train connections and probably would follow the New York players to Marlin at once.

It is known that several promoters have been trying to induce Thorpe to give up baseball and join an athletic combination to tour the United States. One of these promoters told a reporter the other day that he was ready to sign Thorpe and Frank Gotch, the champion wrestler, to join Luther McCarty in such a tour. McCarty would box all comers in four-round bouts, while Gotch would wrestle in exhibitions, each event in the evening. Thorpe would show his athletic, football and baseball skill in the afternoon.

The promoter in question said that this combination, if made, would clear $100,000 in less than six months, and that he had guaranteed at least a third of this amount to Thorpe. The Indian's contract with the Giants for this year calls for a $6,000 salary.

Thorpe, it is said, got $500 for taking part in professional athletic games in Boston last Saturday night. He disappointed McGraw in failing to leave here Sunday night with Marty and other New York players for the South, en route to Marlin.

Thorpe, it was explained, passed through here from Boston early Sunday morning on the way to Harrisburg, where he was expected to join McGraw.

Perhaps when the Indian reaches Marlin he will receive some fatherly advice from the clannish leader.

An interesting hockey match of importance to local "fans" will be that between the Hockey Club of New York and the Pilgrim A. A. seven at the Arena tonight.

The Hockey Club is one of the fastest teams in the big city, and is now tied for first place with the St. Nicks in the Amateur Hockey League of New York. It has been organized for several years, and has always been regarded as a team of clever skaters and good hockey players.

Like all the New York teams, the Hockey Club is always anxious to win over organal aggregations either opposing them in Boston, and it will put up a hard battle to down the locals tonight.

The Pilgrims, however, have shown very good form in their last two games, losing one and winning the other, and they are just as anxious to win as their opponents. They regard the Hockey Club as easier to defeat than a Canadian seven, and they are not over-confident and they will play hard and fast from start to finish.

The locals had an off night of practice last night, and all the men displayed improvement in their play. Whitten, who was injured in the game last Wednesday with the Three Rivers team, will probably get back into the game tonight, and his return will give the team its full strength.

On Saturday night the Medfords, Unlevelly team play the B. A. A. seven at the Arena.

Champion Kilbane Battles Kirkwood in 'Go' Tonight

By JACK CONWAY.

JOHNNY KILBANE, the clever little featherweight champion, will be seen in action this evening. The Cleveland youth is scheduled to meet George Kirkwood in the feature bout in an all-star show before the Empire Club in New York. The contest will be a ten-round affair, and, although Kirkwood is a good performer, nobody has yet been discovered who believes that the little fielder will experience a great deal of difficulty in winning.

Kilbane does not win the majority of his ring engagements by landing a knockout punch, but he triumphs nevertheless. He is usually satisfied with outpointing his opponent and does not take any needless chances of injuring his hands by trying to send every man whom he meets to dreamland.

KILBANE DEPENDS UPON HIS SKILL.

Many critics claim that Kilbane is not a regular champion on account of his desire to merely outpoint his opponents. They argue that he should start fighting for all that he is worth when the gong sounds at the opening of the first round and that he should experience no letup until the other fellow is lying prostrate on the canvas—helpless and beaten to a frazzle.

There is no denying the fact that Kilbane could "stop" in a few rounds many of the featherweights who now stay the limit with him. He knocked out Joe Rivers in sixteen rounds on the Coast, and while those at the ringside claim that it was a lucky punch, it nevertheless goes to prove that Jimmy Dunn's battler packs a sweet wallop and can use it when hard pressed.

Packey McFarland, the wonderful ring wizard from Chicago, is another boxer who is not a believer in the theory that a leading mill wielder should try and score "K. O." victories over all of his opponents. He said recently when discussing this question:

"A boxer's hands are his tools. He must, therefore, take good care of them. If he slugs in each bout with his opponent, he will soon break his 'tools' and will then be obliged to retire from the ring."

OSCAR BATTLING MATHEW NELSON will soon be in our midst. Yes, dear reader, Hegewitch's famous citizen will pay us a visit in a few days. The Battler has been matched to meet Ray Wood in a two-round bout at New Bedford on Washington's Birthday and the veteran is sure that he will be returned the winner. He will step off here on his way to the Whaling City, and, of course, he will not fail to tell us how he is going to regain the lightweight championship. "But" is a terrible word, young man personally, but somehow or other he cannot be made to believe that he is not still the greatest fighter of his weight in the world.

AMATEUR boxers who wish to compete in the tournament to be held by the Cambridge A. A. Thursday night should have their entries in tonight, as the entry list closes this evening. The classes are 120, 126 and 158 pounds. The heavyweight special between Dan McDonald of Nova Scotia and Cliff Conrad of Everett is bound to be a rugged contest. The other special bout between Harold Deshler of Worcester and Jimmy Duffy of Jamaica Plain brings together two of the best boys in this section in the 105 pound class.

Big Squad Working Out for Swimming Team at B. C. High

While the students of Boston College High School are enthusiastic over the showing of the "prep" track team, an unusual amount of interest is being displayed in the swimming team, which has started practicing.

Swimming is an entirely new undertaking in sports by the students of the James street institution. Wiley Manager Thomas J. Heath, '13, who has charge of the destinies of this team, issued the call for candidates about fifty names were handed in.

Practice sessions will be held at the Cyber street "gym" Tuesday and Friday afternoons. Manager Heath expects to arrange several dual meets with the various high and "prep." teams about Boston.

Among the men who have reported for practice are: O'Leary, McCarthy, McMulkin, Ostridge, Phelan, Quigley, McGuire, Pierce, Sargent, Simons, Creed, Lynch, Mulligan, Blackwell, Bradley, Crowley, Moll, Reid, Grace, Foley, Kennedy, Curry, Howe, Maloney, Moran, Supple, Clifford, Andress, Sheehan, Sullivan and Reilly.

Rivers Topheavy Choice in Fight with 'K. O.' Brown

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Feb. 19.—Joe Rivers will be an overwhelming favorite over "K. O." Brown for their fight next Saturday afternoon unless some Brown money shows on the market mighty soon. Opening at 10 to 9 favorite last week, odds on the Mexican have gradually tightened with the absence of Brown money, until today Rivers is quoted by all betting commissioners at 10 to 7.

"I expect to get 2 to 1 for my money," declared Dan Morgan, Brown's manager, several days ago, and it begins to look as though "Dumb Dan" will get it.

Rivers' morning yesterday seems to have made him the unanimous choice of the local bettors in the event that the bout goes the scheduled distance. About the only chance credited to Brown is via the knockout route. He is an awkward sailor, and some of Rivers' admirers fear the Mexican will find it difficult to adjust himself to Brown's style of fighting. This might enable Brown to land a crack on Rivers' jaw hard enough to win the fight.

The fact that Brown is said to have slinded Wolgast when the former champion was at his best also does not appear to be considered by Rivers' following. The Dutchman's chances of being able to put over a sleep wallop are looked upon as being so slight that a wager at odds of 3 to 1 was laid today that he would not win inside of ten rounds.

JOE SILVA TO START IN BIG ROAD RACE

Joe Silva will be entered by the B. A. A. for the cross-country run of the St. Joseph's T. A. So. to be held on Washington's Birthday at 10 a. m. It is doubtful if more than any other entries from the Unicorn Club, although Cook may not be named.

He answered me with tears like dew:
"Mazurka wins at 5 to 2,

Suspension of Lippincott Surprise to Sport World

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 19.—The athletic world was today stirred by the news that Donald F. Lippincott, the University of Pennsylvania sprinter, whose sensational work was one of the chief features of the Olympic games at Stockholm, Sweden, last Summer, has been suspended by the Middle Atlantic Association of the Amateur Athletic Union. The announcement that Lippincott has fallen under the amateur ban was made after a meeting of the Registration Committee of the A. A. U.

Lippincott has been suspended because he failed to render an account of his expenses to A. A. U. officials after his recent trip to New York, where he competed in the Fordham University games. It is believed here that the Pennsylvania star will make this report immediately and that he will then be placed on good standing again.

A. A. U. LEADERS ON WAR PATH

The suspension of Lippincott, following upon the confession of Jim Thorpe, the Carlisle athlete who recently admitted that he is a professional, has caused a tremendous amount of excitement in athletic circles. The leaders of the A. A. U. are evidently on the warpath and intend to punish all athletes who do not live up to the laws which govern amateur sporting events in this country.

Penn men believe that Lippincott's failure to give an account of his expenses after his trip to New York was due to an oversight on his part.

Must Render an Account.

It is a rule of the Amateur Athletic Union that when an athlete competes out of the district in which he resides he must make a report of his expenses, what he received, if he did receive anything, and this the registration committee compares with the itemized account that is received from the association conducting the games. If the two do not agree then the athlete is in for a session.

Lippincott failed to report to the committee, and his suspension followed as a matter of course.

Just as soon as he makes good on his expense account, his suspension will be lifted, until then he cannot participate in amateur competition.

Lippincott, although he has been looked upon as a great sprinter in Philadelphia for several years, and during that time received the pick of all schoolboy sprinters, obtained world-wide publicity by reason of his work in the Olympic tryouts in Boston, and afterwards became famous the world over for creating a new Olympic record of 10 3-5 seconds for the 100-metre race in Stokholm, and finishing third in the final of the 100 metres, and second in the 200-metre race.

Is Star Performer.

In both of these races he was as good as the winner. In fact he had the 200-metre at his mercy until he looked over his shoulder to see where his competitors were—his one fault in running. Lippincott this season is looked upon as Pennsylvania to be the best individual weaver of the Red and Blue, for he can run any distance, from the 100 to the quarter-mile, and run it well.

Harvard and Yale Boat Race Takes Place on June 20

NEW HAVEN, Feb. 18.—Arrangements for the three formal events of the annual Yale-Harvard rowing regatta have been announced by Joseph Walker, president of the Yale navy. The dates have been made in the traditional list of events. Although the managers will later take up three informal races which will be scheduled the day before the routine races and which will probably include the unmovable of an eight-oared mile race by the juniors, as well as the usual freshman four-oared and the graduate eight-oared mile races on the Thames, opposite the quarters of the crews.

The only change in the formal program is the early starting of the two morning races. The freshman eight-oared event, which opens the program, will be rowed at 9:15 o'clock, because of the early high tide for that morning. The varsity fours will follow about 10 o'clock, and the varsity eight-oared race will be rowed at 5:30.

The main event will be rowed down stream. The morning races will be rowed upstream.

Friday, June 20, has been decided upon for the regatta date.

TOUCHARD-SHAFER IN FINAL MATCH

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Play in the national indoor lawn tennis championship singles and doubles has reduced the field to the finalists. G. C. Shafer and G. F. Touchard will meet for the singles title Thursday, while Touchard and W. B. Crugin, Jr., will compete with W. C. Grant and G. C. Shafer for the doubles honors today. The most sensational match yesterday was that in which Shafer, the former Columbia University star, defeated Grant, the playing champion, 7-5, 11—9, 6—1. Shafer is the first player to defeat Grant when he has gone through a tournament so far as the semi-final round.

GOLDEN PLACED IN GOOD STANDING

CINCINNATI, O., Feb. 19.—Player Roy Golden, who was released by the St. Louis Nationals to the St. Paul Club of the American Association in 1912 and returned by the latter club on account of his not being in playing condition, has been reinstated by the National Baseball Commission without the infliction of a fine. Golden quit the game voluntarily, pending the recovery of his pitching arm, and has not played with any team since.

Nunamaker Refuses to Sign Contract with the Red Sox

Leslie Nunamaker, the big Red Sox catcher, has not yet signed to play for the world's champions this year. Nunamaker held a conference with President Lannin last Friday, but nothing definite was done. The two men will meet today again and an agreement may be reached.

Nunamaker believes that he is worth more than the Red Sox management is willing to pay him, and it is reported that he will quit baseball unless he is given his own demands.

This is very improbable, however, as McAleer is not letting a few dollars stand in the way of signing up any of his star performers. It is therefore believed that Nunamaker will be a member of the Red Sox squad when Spring training is settled.

KID M'COY JOINS UPLIFT; WILL BE AN EVANGELIST

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—Norman Selby, best known as "Kid McCoy," of the prize ring, is to become an evangelist. He will preach the Gospel of Health from the public forums which the social centre movement aims to establish in the public school houses outside of school hours.

A campaign has been started by Mrs. David Kirk, widow of a Pittsburgh millionaire, to have the buildings utilized in this way. She is receiving encouragement from the Board of Education.

Tomorrow night Mr. Selby will be heard for the first time in his new role at Public School No. 41, Eighth street, near Sixth avenue. He said yesterday that his determination to forget his career as pugilist and saloon keeper and become an evangelist was the result of reading a New York American editorial telling how 5000 human beings die needlessly every year.

"I made up my mind that I would do what I could to promote rational living and uplift humanity," he said. "First of all I want to teach people that health is the centre of everything worth while. It is that horrendous condition of the body and mind which enables the physical organs to perform their functions properly. I believe in love and kindness, but I don't believe in turning your cheek to receive a wallop after pulling the first one. Protect yourself.

"Treat your fellow-man as a brother and as you would like to have your brothers treated. And treat women in the same way—treat them as sisters or mothers. That is what I mean by love and kindness."

Asked if he held any theory as to the future state of man that he might discuss in his lectures, Selby said:

"Just as all streams and rivulets flow finally down to mother ocean, so I believe that the spirits of mankind flow ultimately to the Father Spirit and gather about Him."

The Plunderers

AN ADVENTURE OF THE FAMOUS CAPTAIN KETTLE

By CUTCLIFFE HYNE

BEYOND ran rosy blue water, with a rickety wharf straddling a mile out into it like some uncouth gray-legged centipede. Beneath the water, dimmed rusty food cans grew intimate with the coral scalp.

In Winter time Point Sebastian was a resting place for cabobs of the North, and a congregation spot for those delightful American women who leave a convenient husband at work elsewhere on the dollar mill. But in the warmer months these worthy people did their pleasure living at the sea beaches of the North or at the hotels of the Alleghanies and the rest house at Point Sebastian tacked and covered most of its glories.

The Floridian who stays in Florida all Summer does so usually because of a tightness of the exchequer. For the few of his friends who come to dissipate a small but hardly scraped-up hoard, in a spelt of semi-civilization, a tenth of the available rooms are ample lodging places.

Still there was a Summer season, and sports at Point Sebastian which were merry enough in its way. Most nights on the parapet of the hall a canary would be dancing under the stars of electric lights in the full of Teatime fiddles, and in the cool gloom of the piazzas outside, if sterilized means did prevent the actual dispelling of marriages contracted even January undiagnosed flagey collapse, even penury undiagnosed could enjoy the delights of the week's distractions.

Forced Witticisms

Mr. Keal Williams and his tribe were entertaining fellows enough to most for a partial time, and boldens coming in the hotel for an annual outing, looked in the odor of their pretty sayings, brightly arranged themselves for a mocking temporary amusement.

Patrick Cambel met at least five men there he knew, which shows the great advantage of being a university man, because at Oxford and Cambridge they most successfully refrain from teaching one anything that is of commercial value to any one except a parson or a doctor or a schoolmaster, it is assumed, and that being men from those seats of learning fail to make a living at home and still achieve the sea.

He did not make the smallest record about his advent. As the newspapers had told them already, and had been on the mucky Port Eden when she came to rest, he had managed to get out with only a marvelous streak of luck, and found himself at a spot where less than a year before he had been wandering about on a scouting expedition.

Further he had made his way in a dugout, bought from a Seminole, to the hotel on Point Sebastian.

There was nothing surprising about it. He had several opportunities for drowning before that, but none of those had ever come off. So he supposed that the Parcae marked him out to live. And—what more had they have?

At that period Mr. Patrick Cambel was feeling extremely pleased with himself. He judged the work at which he had been engaged as one was more suited to be mixed with a swindle, be it great or small, and that was second nature.

He had had a struggle for it, because once more Captain Kettle had for inclined to be his own master than to accept all things for mere employers who only paid him a salary. For Captain Kettle broke from that dead sleep on the wharf greeting of the upper bridge and came down to learn of the tragedy of the plantagenets which had taken place during his unconsciousness that he could only tell of this. The little Captain received him with cold stiffness, and would when asked for any suggestion and snarled when Cambel inquired what ailed him. It was the donkeyman who put the difficulty into words.

"And Captain, now," said he, "how much might you be getting out of all this for yersel'?"

"Five hundred pounds sterling."

"Be gor, it's a mighty lot of money and little enough. I wish I'd it myself. And more. I'd like a house ashore, and a wife, and an ass cart that I might drive her out in like a gentleman, besides other things."

"Oh, stop that! Don't tell me what a man might do if he'd his pick of the money in this ship. I can figure that out for myself without suggestions from any blasted Irishman."

"Ah, now, Captain, dear, don't be cross with me, because I was going on to say that, in case of trouble, in case there was need's say, a striking argument, I'd be on your side. Mr. Cambel, you're a gentleman, and I like ye well, but the Captain is an officer, and—well sor, a boy must look after himself sometimes, especially when there's a chance like this ready to his fingers. Won't come again in a lifetime."

"Probably not," said Cambel. He lay back in his chair with linked fingers behind his head. "Look here, Kettle, if you want to shoot me, pull out your gun and get it over. Then you and Sullivan can run the cargo where you please and share it how you like. But that's the only way you'll make me consent to you taking what is beyond your due. Shoot trusted me and, by Jove, I'm going to get fully my share. I'll be there a ton times bigger thief than I know him to be already. Now, then, jump quick—Kels, have it over."

They were in the chartroom. Captain Kettle puckered his mouth for a minute, thought, and then, getting up, shut and locked the starboard door. He took that key and the key also of the other door, which gave upon the head of the companionway and handed them to Cambel.

"Now, sir," said he, "you lock me and the donkey man in here and go and do your

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I WAS reading a peece to Pa in the paiper last night. The peece and that wimmen was always gaimer than men & that they cud stand a operashun with less speaking about it than a big husky man cud show cover a hed-ake.

I will admit that part of it, sed Pa, but you must reemember, Bobbie, that every woman with endures a operashun un-flinchingly & without speaking about it makes up for her bravery by speeking about it every day after she gits better, yes, every day till the end of her life. In fack, sed Pa, I onst rote a song wich was to go into a opry called My Operashun. This is the way it went, Bobbie:

My dear, I never thought I'd live,
And all my foes I did forgive.
The nurses had no hopes for me,
The Doc was blue as he cud be.
It happened on my last vacation—
You should have saw my operashun.
I dount think very much of that, I todd Pa.

There isent very much humor in it of itself, sed Pa, but it only goes to show that onst a woman has had a operashun her friends is going to know about it all the rest of the days of her life.

Now, sed Pa, if a honest woodchopper happens to miss a stick of hardwood & swings his dubbel-bitted axe almost thru his own shin, & the leg has to be amputated, do you supose that wen he cums around a year later with a rubber leg he will all the time be talking about the operashun? No, sed Pa; not a chanse.

You see, Pa, sed Is to me, a man may howl a littel wen part of his body is beeing divorced from wut is left, but you never hear him talk about it afterward. I never saw a man in my life that made a speeel or tried to show his friends sum awful scar which he had recefved from a surgeon's knife.

Jest then two of Ma's frends cum to call, Mister & Missus Garrison. Missus Garrison was a littel, pale woman, & Mister Garrison was over six (6) feet tall & waged nearly 250 pounds.

After they had recovered thare wraps, I'm noticed that Mister Garrison was groning, & he sed what is the matter, old boy, are you in pain?

It is the saim old pain, Mister Garrison sed, from a old operashun wich I had six years ago. I was chopping down a pine tree, & in getting away from the falling branches I fell backward & got a sliver in the palm of my hand. It went in seerly half a inch, sed Mister Garrison.

They sent for a doctor, & it was nearly a hour beefore the doctor cud git there. He took his knives, etc., & he got that splinter out, sed Mister Garrison, but I shall never forgit the awful agony of that terrifiul operashun till my dying days. It hurts me now, on rainy days, he sed, tho I hardly ever hear anybody telling me they are sorry. Oh, ouch! My operashun!

I guess the peece I read to Pa out of the paiper was rite, all rite.

Need Attention in February and March For They May Stay Covered

Now is the time to take special care of the complexion if you wish it to look well the rest of the year. The February and March winds have a strong tendency to bring out freckles that may stay all Summer unless removed. Now is the time to use othine—double strength.

This prescription for the removal of freckles is the discovery of an eminent skin specialist, and is so uniformly successful that it is sold by any of the Riker-Jaynes drug stores and Houghton & Dutton, under guarantee to refund the money if it fails. Get an ounce of othine—double strength—and even a few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the smaller freckles even vanishing entirely.

The Wilcox Glide---The Latest Dance: Society Taking Up Dance Originated by Famous Poetess

The greatest beauty to this dance is the posing and rhythmic movements of the lady. She uses the scarf effectively and gracefully, as in the centre figure, and this is the part of the dance that the celebrated writer excels in. The upper and lower photographs show two other movements of the dance. These photographs, illustrating the Wilcox Glide, were posed for by Miss Jane Beers and Professor Chaliff.

By ELIZABETH RATHBONE

THE Ella Wheeler Wilcox Glide is the very latest and most important of the new dances which, like certain famous candles, come fresh every hour.

Mrs. Wilcox herself is sponsor for the dance, and she has danced it at several functions given this season in her honor.

The dance was composed for her by her teacher, Miss Jane Beers, but the famous poetess herself added many new points which, as Miss Beers said, make it essentially her own dance.

"Mrs. Wilcox dances with a scarf, and the way she uses that scarf is so individual, so graceful, that it makes quite a poem in itself," says Miss Beers.

This is what Mrs. Wilcox thinks of her dance and of dancing generally:

"Chaliff paid the enormous compliment, in giving his valuable time to go and dance it with me twice. For a year he was coach of the Metropolitan ballet and a great 'premier' himself. We did dance it well.

"Dancing is a sort of religious ecstacy to me; the whole joy of life is in it. It has always seemed to me that the dance combined all arts; music, poetry, painting, sculpture.

"Dancing is the one thing I do WELL. I have never absolutely arrived in literature; never written anything which won universal approval. But I feel absolutely confident of myself as a dancer. I think I must have been a professional dancer in some other incarnation. Probably in the Temples of the Orient. There is no other entertainment which gives me so much pleasure as to see or participate in dancing."

The Wilcox Glide

Many who never dared say so will agree with Mrs. Wilcox that dancing is one of the most enjoyable forms of exercise, and now that they have her illustrious example they, too, will dare to tread the light fantastic toe in the measures of the Wilcox Glide.

The music of the Wilcox Glide was composed by Professor Borher, and the steps are described here by their creator, Miss Beers.

WILCOX GLIDE.

Position — Regular ballroom position.

Ladies' Part — First step — Right foot to right side, point, step right foot in back of left, step left to left side, step right foot in front of left—two measures.

Second Step—"Hop glide"—hop on left foot, slide right to right side, bringing heels together. Repeat the same thing — two measures.

Third Step—"A Two-Step Turn" slide, right, left, right, turn half way again to make a complete turn—two measures.

Repeat all from beginning.

The lady's partner goes through the same steps, beginning with the opposite foot, however.

Mrs. Wilcox varies the dance by letting go her partner's hand and executing a series of graceful poses, in which the dead-ing scarf plays its part. While she is dancing this solo her partner continues to keep the time and rhythm of the dance, or to dance after her, but without taking hold of her hands until the beginning of a new measure or until a time indicated, when he rejoins the lady.

A New Variation

Professor Chaliff, in speaking of the Wilcox Glide, said that it was one of the new variations of the one-step, the popular dance of the moment. It is danced with the toe pointed as shown in the illustration, which represents the partners in their respective positions and the solo dance done by Mrs. Wilcox alone.

While Professor Chaliff was speaking a class of very small children were being dismissed and were leaving the room very reluctantly, lingering to do just one more pirouette. Some of them had been sent to dancing class to strengthen their small feet, for the pointed toe dances are excellent not only for strengthening the feet, but for developing the high arch or improving the fallen arches.

"Mrs. Wilcox dances well," was the professor's comment. "She enjoys the physical exercise and the mental exhilaration of dancing, and she is one of the remarkable people who never stop learning something new, whether it's science or a dance. She goes at it with enthusiasm, and is as apt a pupil as she is wonderful as a teacher in her writings."

LITERAL INTERPRETATION

HE was a very nervous and flustered young man as he entered the court to give evidence in an important case.

It was his very first experience of publicity in any shape or form, and the amount of interest shown in his utterances—he who had never even addressed a meeting of the local debating society—went straight to his head. His replies to any the least of it, were unintelligible.

"Speak up! Speak up!" called counsel irritably at last. "The lady shorthand-writer cannot hear a single word of what you're saying. Kindly turn towards and speak to her."

There was a moment's pause, while the young man blushed vividly. Then, to the amazement of the court, he rose from his chair, made a profound obeisance in the direction of the afore-mentioned young woman, and murmured bashfully:

"How d'you do?"

Not Included

"Doesn't your choir sing at the prison any more?"

"No;" several of the prisoners objected on the ground that it wasn't included in their sentences."

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

As Viewed by Her Family

GRIEF, as pictured on canvas and in marble, does not appeal to neat housekeepers.

She is painfully thin, showing either a lack of food or the partaking of that which is so unscientifically prepared it contains no nutritive elements, and her hair hangs in an untidy mop down her back.

And there is nothing so unpalatable in effects as butter and cooking as grief-strewn hair. The modern, progressive woman shows her sorrow in ways that are more hygienic and less disfiguring.

Daysey Mayme Appleton had been temporarily engaged. Her lover had not appeared for a week when one evening Daysey Mame, looking somewhat pale, but with every hair in its place and no sign of germ-producing tears in her eyes, said somewhat sadly, but withal bravely, just like the heroines in the books:

"In my next incarnation I intend to be a tree."

"A lemon tree? asked her brother, with that friendly interest which characterizes all brothers, "or a chestnut tree, which?"

"A quivering ash?" asked her romantic mother. "It is sensitive to every little breeze that blows."

"Perhaps a persimmon," said Chauncey Devere.

"I would suggest hickory," said Lysander John, with a look of rebuke at his son. "I have heard that the switches that grow on a hickory tree have great influence on bad boys."

Daysey Mayme sighed. Life was so hard when one was surrounded by uncongenial larkins.

"In my next incarnation," she said, choking back a sob, "I will be a weeping willow."

Then her family knew that her lover had forsaken her, and that in the most modern and high-browed, approved fashion she had found expression for her grief.

Up-to-Date Jokes

A huntsman called on Hodge to settle for damages done by a run to hounds, and found only Mrs. Hodge at home.

"Has you husband," he inquired, "made an examination yet?"

"That he have, sir," replied Mrs. Hodge, with a curtsy.

"Rather a cursory examination, I suspect?"

"Oh, dreadful, sir. Such language I never heard—never!"

* * * *

Father—Come, my son, I cannot allow you to stay out so late at night. When I was your age my father had me in every night at 7 o'clock.

Boy—Very queer father you must have had, then.

Father—A jolly sight better father than you've got, you young rascal.

* * *

Guest—Look here, waiter. The portion of chicken you served to me was not cooked the size of it. The portion you just gave to that fat man over there. I'm going to make a complaint. Where's the manager?

Waiter (indicating fat party in the foreground)—That's him, sir.

Deduction

"Aha!" exclaimed Hurlock Sholmes, as he entered the apartment. "There was a mouse in the room."

"Your power of scent, Hurlock," commented Wootor Dotson, "is simply marvellous!"

"Scent be bothered!" said the great detective. "See the heel-marks of a woman's shoe on this chair?"

THE boy took the silver given him, touched his hat and sauntered off.

"You see," explained Dunbar, "it wasn't exactly the thing for you to be traveling without a bit of baggage. I thought it might help them to trace you if you really were being followed. So I took the liberty of 'phoning over to the clubhouse and telling the boy to bring down the suitcase that I left there yesterday.

"I don't exactly know what's in it. I had the man pack it and send it down to me, thinking I might stay all night at the club. Then I went home, after all, and forgot to take it along.

"It probably hasn't anything very appropriate for a lady's costume, but there may be a hairbrush and some soap and handkerchiefs. And, anyway, if you accept it, it'll be something for you to bitch on to."

"One feels a little lost even for one night without a rag one can call one's own except a Pullman towel. I thought it might give you the appearance of a regular traveler, you know, and not a runaway."

He tried to make her laugh about it, but her face was deeply serious as she looked up at him.

"I think this is the kindest and most thoughtful thing you have done yet," she said. "I don't see how I can ever, ever thank you!"

"Don't try," he returned gaily. "There's your train being called. We'd better go right out and make you comfortable. You are beginning to be very tired."

She did not deny it, but rose to follow him, scanning the waiting room with one quick, frightened look. An obsequious porter at the gate seized the suitcase and led them in state to the Pullman.

The girl found herself established in the little drawing room compartment, and her eyes gave him thanks again. She knew the seclusion and the opportunity to lock the compartment door would give her relief from the constant fear that an unwelcome face might at any moment appear beside her.

"The conductor on this train is an old acquaintance of mine," he explained as that official came through the car. "I have taken this trip with him a number of times. Just sit down a minute. I am going to ask him to look out for you and see that no one annoys you."

The burly official looked grimly over his glasses at the pale face under the big black hat, while Tryon Dunham explained, "She's a friend of mine. I hope you'll be good to her."

In answer, he nodded grim assent with a smileless alacrity which was nevertheless satisfactory and comforting.

Then the young man walked through the train to interview the porter and the newsboy, and in every way to arrange for a pleasant journey for one who three hours before had been unknown to him.

As he went he reflected that he would rather enjoy being comforter himself just for that night. He felt a strange reluctance toward giving up the oversight of the young woman whose destiny for a few brief hours had been thrust upon him, and who was about to pass out of his world again.

When he returned to her he found the shades closely drawn and the girl sitting in the sheltered corner of the section, where she could not be seen from the aisle, but where she could watch in the mirror the approach of any one. She welcomed him with a smile, but instantly urged him to leave the train, lest he be carried away.

He laughed at her fears and told her there was plenty of time. Even after the train had given its preliminary shudder he lingered to tell her that she must be sure to let him know by telegraph if she needed any further help; and at last swung himself from the platform after the train was in full motion.

Immediately he remembered that he had not given her any money. How could he have forgotten? And there was the North Side Station yet to be passed before she would be out of danger.

Why had he not remained on the train until she was past that stop, and then returned on the next train from the little flag station a few miles above, where he could have gotten the conductor to slow up for him?

The swiftly moving cars asked the question as the long train flew by him. The last car was almost past when he made a daring dash and flung himself headlong upon the platform, to the horror of several trainmen who stood on the adjoining tracks.

"Gee!" said one, shaking his head. "What does that dude think he is made of, anyway? Like to got his head busted that time, for sure."

The brakeman, coming out of the car door with his lantern, dragged him to his feet, brushed him off and scolded him vigorously. The young man hurried through the car obvious of the eloquent harangue, happy only to feel the floor jolting beneath his feet, and to know that he was safe on board.

He found the girl sitting where he had left her, only she had flung up the shade of the window next her, and was gazing with wide, frightened eyes into the fast flying darkness. He touched her gently on the shoulder, and she turned with a cry.

"Oh, I thought you had fallen under the train!" she said in an awed voice. "It was going so fast! But you did not get off, after all, did you? Now, what can you do? It is too bad, and all on my account."

"Yes, I got off," he said decidedly, sitting down opposite her and pulling his chin straight. "I got off, but it wasn't altogether satisfactory, and so I got on again. There wasn't much time for getting on gracefully, but you'll have to excuse it. The fact is, I couldn't bear to leave you alone just yet. I couldn't rest until I knew you had passed the North Side Station. Besides, I had forgotten to give you my money."

"Oh, but you mustn't!" she protested, her eyes eloquent with feeling.

"Please don't say that," he went on eagerly. "I can get off later and take the down train, you know. Really, the fact is, I couldn't let you go right out of existence this way without knowing more about you."

"But I have told you all there is to tell about the lips, and drawing closer into her corner.

"Don't feel that way," he said. "I'm not going to bother you. You couldn't think that of me, surely. But isn't it only fair that you should show me a little consideration? Just give me an address, or something, where I could let you know if I heard of anything that concerned you. Of course it isn't likely I shall, but it seems to me you might at least let me know how you are safe."

"I will promise you that," she said earnestly. "You know I'm going to send you back those things." She touched the cloth and the hat. "You might need them to keep you from having to explain their absence," she reminded him.

The moments fairly flew. They passed the North Side Station, and were nearing the flag station. After that there would be no more stops until past midnight. The young man knew he must get off.

He had formed a mind to go on to Chicago and see that you are safely located," he said with sudden daring. "It seems too terrible to set you adrift in the world this way."

"Indeed you must not," said the young woman with gentle dignity. "Have you stopped to think what people—what your mother, for instance—would think of me if she were ever to know that I had permitted such a thing? You know you must not. Please don't speak of it again."

To-day's Stock Prices; Financial News

There was an improvement in stock market sentiment when trading began and the price tendency was for a rise. Business was fairly active in Boston, although few issues showed price changes at the start. During the first half hour Granby gained a point and at the end of the first hour Tamarack was 1¼ higher and Lake 1⅝. Butte and Superior, Isle Royal and Mayflower had also advanced.

By 11 o'clock in the New York market Steel was a point higher, Southern Pacific's gain was 1⅝.

It is reported from New York that 15 cents a pound is being asked for copper and that there is a fair demand from domestic consumers. In Europe the market is said to be unsettled and the American Smelting & Refining Company is still offering electrolytic on the 14¾ cents basis. Other leading American agencies are holding out for 15 cents a pound.

A cablegram received this morning at the New York office from Cairo, Egypt, states that J. P. Morgan continues to improve in health.

The New York sub-treasury gained $1,826,000 in banks yesterday and has gained $4,250,000 since Friday.

New York Opens Stronger.

The New York market was stronger at the start. One contributing influence was news that the mill was to close at noon. Prices of most issues were higher at the opening. Canadian Pacific advanced 2% and Chino Copper was up more than a point. Professionals soon began taking profits and there were some recessions.

Among the early advances were Amalgamated, 1/8; Copper 1⅛, Steel ¼, Union Pacific ⅜, Southern Pacific ⅜, Reading ⅜, Consolidated Gas ⅜, Canadian Pacific ½, American Can ⅝, American Smelting ⅝, Lehigh Valley ½ and M. K. & T. ⅜.

Goodrich lost a point and United States Rubber was ⅝ lower. Amalgamated shaded later, losing half a point of its early gain, and Steel, Southern Pacific, Reading, American Can and others lost part of their advances.

The curb was dull.

Foreign Sentiment More Cheerful.

American stocks made gains on the New York passing the London market in fairly trading there, and foreign sentiment regarding this class of issues was much more cheerful. Reports from Berlin are more hopeful of the Balkan situation. In London, Union Pacific and Steel had the most relative activity and there was buoyancy in Canadian Pacific. On the other hand, there was selling of Chesapeake & Ohio. The advance in London of American securities attracted a good deal of attention in New York, and was a strengthening influence in the big American market at the opening.

More Gold for Argentina.

Additional engagement for gold coin to be shipped to South America on Saturday next were made this morning. Heidelbach, Ickelheimer & Co. engaged $250,000 and Kidder, Peabody & Co., $250,000.

The latter has total engagements for shipment to Argentina at the end of this week up to $1,250,000.

Copper Higher in London.

The London copper market became firmer after the opening and prices were higher, as it was, at the start. Both spot and futures were up 5s.

The reduction of the price of electrolytic from 15 to 14¾ cents a pound in Europe by the American Smelting & Refining Company caused many consumers to believe there will be a price war between leading producers and that they may be able to get metal supplies cheaper than at even the latter figure. The action of the Guggenheim agency is said to have surprised its competitors.

It is understood that Phelps, Dodge & Co. by cutting their price, when Amalgamated and Guggenheim interests were standing by the agreed price of 17¾ cents, were able to dispose of their stock well into the future. Now the trade believes that the two largest agencies, which have 15c for delivery next year, have "more than their proportionate amount of second copper on hand."

One commentator on the situation said today: "It was thought on Monday that the worst point in the bottom had been reached on this movement, and material evidence of such belief was apparent in the buying of quantities of copy by consumers and exporters of copper as far ahead as May. But a further break has considered probable sales early this week would have been on a considerably smaller basis."

Financial News in Brief.

The holding of which J. P. Morgan & Co. are having elected at Wall and Broad streets, New York, will be the finest structure in the world occupied as a private banking house. It will be 23 stories high and the three upper floors will be occupied by the firm. The estimates of its cost are between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000. The building will be four stories high and the three upper floors will be set back from every street on which it will front instead of resting on steel girders as in the usual construction.

One of the things which caused a slump in the stock market yesterday was the announcement that Speaker Shaw had refused a new bill introduced at Albany increasing the transfer tax from $2 to $4 a hundred shares.

A Vienna newspaper says the Rothschilds' group from Paris and London are negotiating on issue of a 4½ per cent. loan to cover Austria's extraordinary military expenditure caused by the European crisis.

Illinois bankers are preparing to fight the Blue Sky law bill introduced in the Legislature of that State.

A seat on the New York Cotton Exchange has just been sold for $17,500, which is $500 less than was obtained at the last previous sale. In the Boston Commercial Exchange Ellinger was the seller and George G. Adams the buyer.

Slump in Security Prices.

Thompson, Towle & Co. have prepared a table showing the extent of the February decline in prices of securities. The figures give low prices in 1912 and 1911 for leading issues in both Boston and New York. They are:

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

Another Warning, but the Killing Goes on

President Taft has issued another solemn warning to Mexico.

Madero, if he has kept all President Taft's notices that this country does not like to have its citizens maltreated, etc., must have the finest collection of ultimata of any collector in the world.

When England or Germany issues a note of warning to a turbulent country that is so interested in its own quarrels as to pay no attention to the rights of foreigners, the warning is heeded or something happens.

It is different with the U. S. A. under President Taft.

"The United States expects and demands," thundered our President a year ago, "that American life and property within the Republic of Mexico be justly and adequately protected and that this government must hold Mexico and the Mexican people responsible for all wanton or illegal acts sacrificing or endangering American life or damaging American property," etc.

The immediate effect of this was that things went on just as usual. How effective was this warning and those that succeeded it is evident from the present situation in Mexico City, where for ten days the peaceable foreigner has been safe only in his cellar—and then only if his house is not blown down with cannon on top of him.

What is happening to our people outside the Mexican capital can only be guessed, for the news that is not stopped by the rebel destruction of telegraph lines is headed off by the censorship of what is left of the government.

The suppression of official reports that come to Washington adds to the sinister uncertainty. It is a curious interpretation of the duties of the rulers of a republic that the truth of what is happening to our fellow citizens in a foreign peril should be denied publicity lest the people should become so inflamed as to insist on something besides threats that are not meant to be carried out.

A bluff is good only when it succeeds. Does President Taft expect Mexico to be frightened into respecting the rights of our people by this wordy culmination of a year's admonition:

"In reciprocating the anxiety shown by your excellency's message, I feel it my duty to add sincerely and without reserve that the course of events during the past two years, culminating in the present most dangerous situation, creates in this country extreme pessimism and the conviction that the present paramount duty is the prompt relief of the situation."

A judge rendering an opinion on a suit involving title to a carload of coal could have pronounced no more deadly a sentence.

Why and Wherefore of Tips

An eminent German jurist has come out with the dictum that waiters are entitled to tips, which should not be considered as gratuities but lawful pay for transportation. According to the jurist, the waiter performs a service similar to that of the teamster hired to take goods from manufacturer to consumer.

The difficulty with the jurist's interpretation lies in its liability to a demoralizing construction. If a waiter is entitled to a tip for carrying dishes from kitchen to dining room, then the man who sells a cigar is entitled to a tip; likewise the salesgirl who hands down a bolt of ribbon, and so on ad infinitum. Hundreds of people insist on tipping taxicab chauffeurs. Then why not tip street car conductors?

A tip ought to be regarded as a reward for good service; as evidence of appreciation on the part of the giver. But in these days the careless waiter must receive as much as the good waiter. Neglect to give a tip is an invitation to an insult. Hence the Society for the Prevention of Useless Tips, known as the Sputs.

But while there are waiters there will always be tips, which leaves us where we were before.

PEACE WITH DISHONOR

By ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE

Comes a protest from the border where the gallant Travis fell;
And the souls of Crockett, Bowie, strive to burst their earthly shell;
There's a laugh from Santa Ana in the utmost depths of hell!

O RANGER, spread the tidings that the Yankee breed has failed,
That a man of straw is trembling while the Yankee flag's assailed.
Let the word of shame be uttered, let the pinioned eagle know
That we cannot bear our honor when it loudly bids us go!

O Ranger, splashing madly through the muddy Texas ford,
Why ride ye thus to call upon a broken, rusted sword?
The times have changed, O Ranger, and a world looks on in awe,
While the Yankee banner's lowered by a trembling man of straw.

Oh, gone are Barrett Travis and the men who made the stand
At Alamo's poor fortress for the honor of their land;
They may not rise to aid us and our flag in shame is furled,
So we gain Peace with Dishonor and the sneers of all the world.

So, Ranger, cease thy riding, for the aid you seek is not
In the place where blood's congealing in the veins that once were hot.
The pinioned eagle flutters, but the earth he may not leave,
As he broods upon Dishonor, as he droops his head to grieve!

While the bones of Barrett Travis stir uneasy where they fell,
While the souls of Crockett, Bowie, strive to break grim Death, his spell,
Come the taunts of Santa Ana from the utmost depths of hell!

The Judicial Temperament

Easter Can't Come on a Fixed Date Because It Is Governed by the Moon.

If It Were Not, It Might Be Placed, Like Christmas, on a Certain Date of Each Year—System of Determining Its Date Made 400 Years B. C.

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

THE great Christian festival of Easter, marking the anniversary of the resurrection of Christ, falls this year within one day of its earliest possible date. It comes on Sunday, March 23. Last year it fell on Sunday, April 7. Some years it occurs several weeks still later.

All other anniversaries except Easter, and the holy days associated with it, fall on a fixed day of each year, and people who are not familiar with what is called the ecclesiastical calendar are often greatly puzzled to account for the wandering of this great festival, whose extreme dates may be as much as five weeks apart. A late Easter has more flowers and more sunshine; an early one, like that of the present year, sometimes feels the last chill of the departed Winter.

The primary reason for the variable date of Easter is the fact that it is the only great festival in Christian countries that depends directly upon the monthly motion of the moon. At the same time, it is affected by the yearly motion of the sun, since its date is governed by the vernal equinox, which is the point in the year when the sun crosses the equator from the southern into the northern hemisphere.

Easter Comes on Sunday Following First Full Moon

But the year and the month are not commensurable lengths of time—that is to say, there is not an even number of lunar months in a year. A lunar month is not the same as a calendar month, but it represents the time from one full moon to the next, which is, on the average, about 29 days, 12 hours, 44 minutes. A year, which is measured by the apparent motion of the sun, is on the average 365¼ days. Now this cannot be divided by the period of a lunar month without a remainder. In consequence, a full moon may occur at any time in the course of an ordinary month.

But the rule for finding the date of Easter is that it must fall upon the Sunday immediately following the first full moon, which occurs on or after March 21, which is the regular date of the equinox.

Last year the first full moon following the equinox happened on April 1, which was a Monday. The next following Sunday, April 7, was then, according to the rule, Easter Day. This year the full moon of the equinox, or the paschal moon as it is called in the church calendar, falls on March 22, which is a Saturday, and the next day, the twenty-third, being Sunday, becomes Easter Day.

System of Determining Easter Made 400 Years B. C.

Inasmuch as Christmas Day, which is celebrated as the anniversary of the birth of Christ, comes at a fixed date every year, December 25, it would appear much simpler to keep Easter also as near a fixed date as possible. It could not be absolutely fixed because of the settled custom of celebrating it on a Sunday, but, as the astronomer Clavius pointed out centuries ago, a reasonable degree of regularity could be introduced by making Easter the first Sunday after the equinox without regard to the phase of the moon. If that rule were adopted the date of Easter would still be a movable one, but its wanderings would be kept within a week of a fixed date.

The existing system of determining the date of Easter is based upon a discovery made more than 400 years before Christ by the Greek astronomer Meton. He found that 235 lunar months are almost exactly equal in total length to 19 years of 365¼ days each. There is a difference of only about two hours in the course of the 19 years. This period is called the Metonic Cycle, and its division into years gives rise to the "Golden Numbers," which indicate the place of any year in the cycle. At the beginning of the cycle, which, as used in the ecclesiastical calendar, is reckoned from January 1, of the year 1, B. C., a new moon happened to fall on January 1. Every 19 years since then there has been a new moon at the beginning of January, but during the intermediate years of the cycle the first new moon of the year occurs at different dates in January, which are always the same place in the cycle. This place is called the Golden Number, and by its aid, through a somewhat complicated system of computation, the date of the paschal moon can be calculated any number of years in advance.

Rule for Finding Golden Number of Any Year

The Golden Number of any year can be found by adding 1 to the number representing the year in ordinary rotation, and then dividing the sum by 19, the remainder being the Golden Number for that year. For instance, add 1 to 1913, divide by 19, and the quotient is 100, with 14 remainder, and this remainder is the Golden Number of the year 1913. It shows that 1913 is the fourteenth year in a Metonic Cycle, and that five years later there will be a new moon on January 1. The date of the first full moon of the year being known, it is easy to calculate the dates of all the other new and full moons that follow. The first new moon of this year occurred on January 7.

If it were not for the almanacs everybody would have to make all these calculations, and many others that we have not mentioned, for himself in order to find out the date of Easter, and it is safe to say that, in that case, it would be still more "movable" than it actually is.

Scientific Training of Children—Few Mothers Are Fitted to Train Their Offspring—Hygienic Care Only Solution Toward Healthier Nation.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company.

"CHILDREN brought up by other than the guiding hands of the mother, whether it be in institutions or in so-called 'homes' or by nurses, are machine raised children. Whoever heard of a genius so reared?"

These words were uttered by a woman opposed to suffrage; a woman who believes in the "good old-fashioned" methods of mothers, and in the tradition of the "maternal instinct" which guides all women to do the right and best thing for their children.

No more fallacious theory was ever talked than this.

Select fifty mothers of your acquaintance at random, and you will not find five who are guiding their children wisely in the ways which lead to good physical development, good behavior, order, system, concentration and unselfish ideals.

The Descendants Would Have Profited by Scientific Feeding

The old-fashioned "good mother" in New England brought up a whole race of dyspeptics by her New England food—preserves and pies, and cakes and pickles, and fried things galore. And when they suffered from indigestion, rheumatism and "lung complaint," she told them it was the "will of God."

It would have been far better for the descendants of these good mothers if some scientifically organized society had taken the children into its care for proper feeding.

Over in France recently the wise law took a child away from the "guiding hand" of a mother who was living such an immoral life that she was declared unfit to have the care of her child.

(An American woman, too!)

This was an extreme case; but there are thousands of mothers who are unfit to guide their children, because they are either selfish, hysterical, ill tempered, disorderly, extravagant or ignorant of the common laws of hygiene and health.

"Loving mothers" allow their children to sit with stooped shoulders and caved-in chests to study, or sew, or read; and so to contract not only ungraceful habits but weak lungs and a curved back.

Only one mother is recalled by the writer who was so unusual that she insisted upon her little girl carrying her book above a cane, held horizontally across her shoulders, in order to produce an erect carriage—a result which made the chief charm of the young woman later in life.

The girl stated that after a few weeks of studying in this way an incorrect position of her chest and shoulders became impossible to her.

Any mother could teach this simple aid to health; but how many do?

Rarely does one meet a boy or a girl of fifteen who breathes correctly. Mothers should begin as soon as the child can understand to explain the necessity to breathe through the nostrils, with closed mouth. And to use ALL the lung cells.

Children Should Be Taught to Care for Own Garments

But how many mothers do?

Every child should be taught to fold its garments when disrobing at night, and to place the morning clothes on a chair neatly, ready for donning; this is the foundation of order.

But few children are so taught. The day nurseries where the children are kept during the mother's absence are far better schools of order and good manners than the homes. Yet no mother is so poor she could not give her child this first simple lesson.

They love their children, and want them to be successful men and women; but they do not know how to train them.

Good mothers talk gossip before their children, and speak of the misdeeds of neighbors, who afterward call, and the children are frequently puzzled to understand how the mother can be so cordial and welcome the people so warmly whose faults have been so critically exposed.

This is an unconscious lesson in hypocrisy and deceit which has been given the child.

The List of Failing Parents Would Fill Many Volumes

The list of the failing of parents, mothers especially, to properly guide children would fill volumes.

Anything which science can do, and progress further, in the way of taking charge of children, and protecting them from the wrong methods of their mothers, will be a blessing to humanity.

It is far better to be a strongly "machine made" human being than one who is nanabasted and never sewed and who comes to pieces at the first strain.

That is what happens to many home-made children.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

A CORRECTION.

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—Communications still arrive by mail and queries are made personally relative to your report of my lecture before the Boston Metaphysical Club. You made me say that "life and even human life would be chemically prepared," etc., whereas I said quite a different thing, viz.: "Even should organic life, including man himself, be chemically produced, it would be only a new and more wonderful process of doing what Nature has been doing always, i. e., evolving the lower and simpler into the higher and more complex."

She held that life can be created only of purely material elements to absolutely contrary to the principles of my philosophy of Animism, and many of my academic friends have mistakenly reproached me with having become a materialist.

Your statement has brought me no end of annoyance.

Note, also, please, that your report made me to be "professor," etc., whereas I am, as a matter of fact, a seminarian member of the Department of Philosophy in Harvard University—in the catalog of 1912-1913. Respectfully yours,

M. K. SCHERMERHORN.
